Master plan changes anger citizens committee

By JOE LIVERNOIS

MONTEREY COUNTY representatives will soon meet with an angry citizens advisory committee in an attempt to iron out committee members' concerns about changes the county planning commission made to the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

After a three-hour hearing before the Monterey County Board of Supervisors May 15, the board agreed to consider the controversial master plan at its June 5 meeting. In the meantime, the still-unscheduled meeting between the county and the advisory committee is to take place.

During the hearing last week, three members of the Carmel Valley Master Plan Citizen Review Committee complained they were never consulted by the planning commission.

'We have never been consulted about the planning commission changes and neither were the changes explained to us.'

mission before that panel rewrote several key policies in the plan. They also said an expected meeting between members of the advisory committee and planning commissioners never materialized.

Mary Ann Matthews, a committee member, pointed out to supervisors that the master plan written by the committee was a "compromise" of so-called development interests and environmental concerns. She said the committee plan was based on "the principle of uniform unhappiness."

But if committee members were uniformly unhappy about policies in the plan when they wrote the 20-year plan, they are now equally unhappy with the planning commission.

The citizens committee wrote the plan during intensive five-month sessions early last year. The seven-member committee, selected by Planning Commissioner Gary Varga of Carmel Valley, included two Carmel Valley resort owners who represented developers' interests and five environmentalists.

The plan they wrote was forwarded to the planning commission which, after a three-month deliberation, recommended supervisors adopt a plan they rewrote.

COMMITTEE MEMBER Nick Lombardo, president of Rancho Canada Golf Club, agreed.

"Compromise was the order of the day," he said of committee efforts to write a fair master plan. "I should know because I was one of the minority members. The citizens advisory committee should have the opportunity to present our views to the board of supervisors."

Second District Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck, who chaired the supervisors' meeting last week in the absence of Fourth District

No free bus ride

Dear Editor:

Councilman David Maradei's newest proposal is "free bus rides" for everyone. Before anyone takes him too seriously, perhaps we should remind him of that fundamental lesson of economics — there is no free lunch.

"Free" bus rides or "free" anything else must be paid for by somebody. What Mr. Maradei is really proposing is that the bus rides should be "free" to certain selected people and paid for by certain other people.

He should be reminded that no government can give away anything without first taking it away from somebody. Someone has to pay for all the give-away programs, from foreign aid to "free" bus rides. And that someone? You and me and all the others who drive cars, own homes or businesses, and pay the taxes.

Some years ago at budget time in Carmel City Hall, a former mayor asked my finance officer, Arthur Plaxton: "What new sources of revenue have you found for us this year?" No one has yet said it better than Mr. Plaxton. "Mr. Mayor, there are no new sources of revenue, there are only new ways of taking money away from the same people, year after year."

Milton Friedman had a marvelous suggestion: "I propose that we add an 11th Amendment to the Bill of Rights. Every person shall be free to do good — at his own expense!"

If Mr. Maradei wanted to provide "free" bus service at his own expense, we could all applaud him. But since he obviously plans to spend our money and not his own for his "free ride" project, we had better speak out before we find it has been done to us once again.

Who gave title?

Dear Editor:

Karin Strasser Kauffman speaks of being Political Woman of the Year. What year? Who gave her this title? Are they with her in this election? How many people belong to the group who gave Political Woman of the Year to Kauffman? Are they broad-based in the Fifth District?

I'm asking around — Chamber of Commerce, League of Women Voters, Republican and Democratic clubs, and other groups. I belong to women's organizations; Kauffman is not Political Woman of any year in any one of my groups.

I'd like to know more.

Linda Perkins
Carmel

Wouldn't support Karin

Dear Editor:

Evidently the lady that wrote complaining about the large trucks on Highway 1 is referring to the old junky looking heaps that are advertising for Karin Kauffman. I agree that they are very offensive. I wouldn't vote for her either for having those old junkers dotting the landscape.

Dorthea Roesler
Salinas

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Roesler is, herself, a candidate for supervisor in the Fifth District in which Mrs. Strasser Kauffman also is a candidate.)

Examine airport issues

Dear Editor:

There is a hidden agenda behind efforts to take over the Monterey Peninsula Airport board. Airport projects, designed to bring the noise pollution down to the state PUC and federal acceptable standards, are under attack by a coalition of Monterey "neighborhood councils" as being "expansionist." (AMBAG minutes, April, 1984.)

The truth is that Monterey wants to annex the airport to the city, and the only way to do this is to elect a board that will vote for this. It's as simple as that.

It is true that the district south of Carmel hill has largely ignored airport problems because we do not endure the noise impacts closer in. However, Carmel quite recently realized, through an alert by the late Councilman Frank Lloyd that an imminent tourist-oriented helicopter service could impact our area. As an airport director (coincidentally living in Carmel) I helped discourage this operation.

A little history: Monterey gave up the airport in 1941 because it was an economic drag. A special district was formed, taxing everyone from Seaside to south of Carmel 28 cents on the dollar. For more than 37 years, we all put our money into funding the airport.

In 1978 the airport, now solvent and no longer in need of tax revenue, went off the rolls. The district is healthy and a vital link not only for transportation but in the peninsula job chain.

I have served the district for the past four years on the basis that everyone from Seaside to south of Carmel be represented. I resent the idea that property I paid taxes on for so many years could be taken over by the city of Monterey, just because "we want the revenues."

Please examine carefully the issues in the airport board election and decide if you want to give the airport over to Monterey. I hope you will believe, with me, that the airport should remain in the hands of the people who paid for it over these many years.

Chairwoman, Monterey Peninsula

Ethical questions raised

Dear Editor:

As a registered Republican and a former candidate for supervisor, I wish to object to the blatant political partisanship expressed in the recent mailing of candidate Ed Lee.

The office of supervisor is strictly non-partisan. A supervisor is required to address the concerns and needs of all the constituents of a district as well as those of the county at large. These concerns and needs are rarely defined within a narrow political scope.

To inject political partisanship into the campaign for supervisor does a great disservice to the voters and raises a question as to the ethical tone of this candidacy.

He's one up

Dear Editor:

Twenty-seven years ago, I bought fine men's wear from a young Carmel haberdasher. He was personable, considerate, dynamic and with an unmistakable aura of class.

Howard Brunn applied these winning characteristics to his many ensuing enterprises in his commercial and community services.

As a Fifth District supervisor he would bring to the Monterey County board sensible, creative thought to the growth problems besetting our unique peninsula.

If being a former haberdasher is a prerequisite in the making of a successful and popular politician, as precedent indicates, he's one up!

Citizens committee anger justified over changes to Valley Master Plan

By ROBERT MISKIMON

MEMBERS of the citizens advisory committee, who worked diligently for many months to help the county revise the Carmel Valley Master Plan, are righteously angry with the county.

Their frustration was generated by the fact that the county planning commission rewrote some crucial elements in the master plan after the committee had finished its work, and before the document was forwarded to the board of supervisors for adoption. (See related story, this issue.)

Specific target of the citizens' frustration is a so-called "front-loading" mechanism in the plan which would permit as many as 400 new residential lots to be established in the first two years of the plan, instead of the average yearly quota established by the citizens committee of 55, based on the 20-year life of the plan.

The somewhat dubious rationale advanced for this drastic change in the plan is that, since implementation of the 1980 master plan was delayed by a court-ordered moratorium on new development in the Valley, some provision should be made to compensate frustrated developers whose plans have been held in abeyance for these years.

Whether this is a just or unjust method of ensuring fair treatment to developers isn't the issue here. What bothers the citizens committee — and rightly so — is the fact these changes were made by the planning commission after the committee had completed its work, and without the involvement or consent of the committee.

Also, as pointed out by the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, this "front-loading" technique could threaten the workability of the remainder of the master plan, since many of the policies in the plan are experimental.

If a sudden rush of lot subdivisions and development overwhelms the county in the initial days and weeks after approval of the master plan, a strong case could be made that adequate environmental safeguards are not provided by the county and another potential lawsuit could shut down the entire system.

But most importantly, there is a question of openness involved with this latest twist to the Carmel Valley Master Plan. Suspensions have been aroused about the credibility of county planning processes and county government, once again.

This is especially painful now, when the prospect of supervisorial elections in June holds the promise of a renewed confidence in government. Let's hope the committee of planning commission, board of supervisors, and citizens committee representatives can resolve this dilemma quickly and fairly so that citizens do not feel their efforts and good will have, once again, been subverted by politics.

Vote for Karin

Dear Editor:

Although mistrust and apathy toward elected officials are often common today, we are now presented a most welcome alternative: Karin Strasser Kauffman for Fifth District supervisor.

From personal experience in working with her on a community project, I see her outstanding qualities as a natural leader, as a person committed to bettering our surroundings and lives at all levels.

It is our great good fortune that Karin Strasser Kauffman is willing to serve in this demanding, challenging capacity. Give her your votes and she will give you her best.

Government: make it work with Karin.

Noisy airport future?

Dear Editor:

Thank you, Nick Ford, airport manager!

During 30 years of noise control consulting, I have never heard anything more amusing than the plan to extend the present runway, effectively double the number of runways, and double the aircraft traffic in order to reduce the noise.

But it's good for only a brief laugh because our railroading engineer manager Nick Ford is leading a sleepy airport board on a collision course with reality. It's a course that has been followed by Los Angeles International Airport, only to collide with the problem of millions of dollars of noise treatment payoffs to suffering nearby residents.

Is this to be the future of the Monterey Peninsula Airport — more noise and taxpayers' payments to impacted residents?

Thanks for support

Dear Editor:

This is a letter of thanks to you and your staff for caring enough about the teenagers in our community to donate over $200 in space for the "We Care" ad which appeared in your March 22 issue.

Your generous contribution, as well as your staff's continued interest in publicizing the activities of the We Care group is deeply appreciated. There is no doubt that Carmel is a caring community, as evidenced by the enthusiastic support We Care received in acquiring signatures and donations for our ad.

In addition, the student support of the Safe Ride program should give the whole community a good feeling about our kids and a desire to support all of the We Care goals to reduce the use of drugs and alcohol by our young people.

Because of your excellent coverage we had a large turnout for our noon meeting at the Carmel Youth Center on Thursday, April 5.

Supervisor candidates in lively debate

By JOE LIVERNOIS

THE MONTEREY COUNTY assessor/tax collector threatened a citizen's arrest of two Monterey County Fifth Supervisorial District candidates who advertise their candidacies with large billboards on pickup trucks when he spoke at a candidates forum sponsored by the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association last week.

Thomas White insisted that candidates Karin Strasser Kauffman and Dortha Roesler stop using the mobile billboards because they violate county ordinances that prohibit billboards in rural Monterey County.

The assessor/tax collector said he was "upset" and "discouraged" about the billboards. White was among about 50 Carmel Valley residents who attended the CVPOA candidates' forum May 15 in Tularcitos School.

His comments prompted a 15-minute debate that finally ended when a member of the audience insisted that the issue was "nit-picky" and urged candidates to address less mundane issues.

White had asked the two candidates whether "I'm going to have to make a citizen's arrest" to stop them from parking the trucks illegally along the side of roadways throughout the Fifth District.

Both Mrs. Strasser Kauffman and Mrs. Roesler said they used the signs because it is the cheapest form of advertising and because their campaigns are not financed by special interests.

Mrs. Roesler, a Toro Park Estates resident, said she "got the idea from Karin."

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman, of Carmel Valley, responded: "My signs weren't ready until yours came out."

She said she was "not aware of the local ordinance" and added she checked California laws on the use of mobile billboards before she put hers out. "It costs less than one ad in the Herald," she said.

Candidates Howard Brunn and Ed Lee, both of Carmel, said they had both considered using the mobile billboards but decided against it.

"I had three trucks ready," Brunn said. He did not use them because "it's a question of style, a question of taste."

"We planned to do that too," Lee said, "but my campaign manager is an attorney and he checked it out."

A fifth candidate, Neill Gardner of Monterey, prompted laughter from the audience when he said: "In all honesty, the idea never entered my mind."

BILLBOARD BROUHAHA aside, the candidates rarely disagreed with each other on more topical issues.

They all said they support construction of a larger dam on the San Clemente site of the Carmel River and they all endorsed construction of a roadway through Hatton Canyon, east of Carmel.

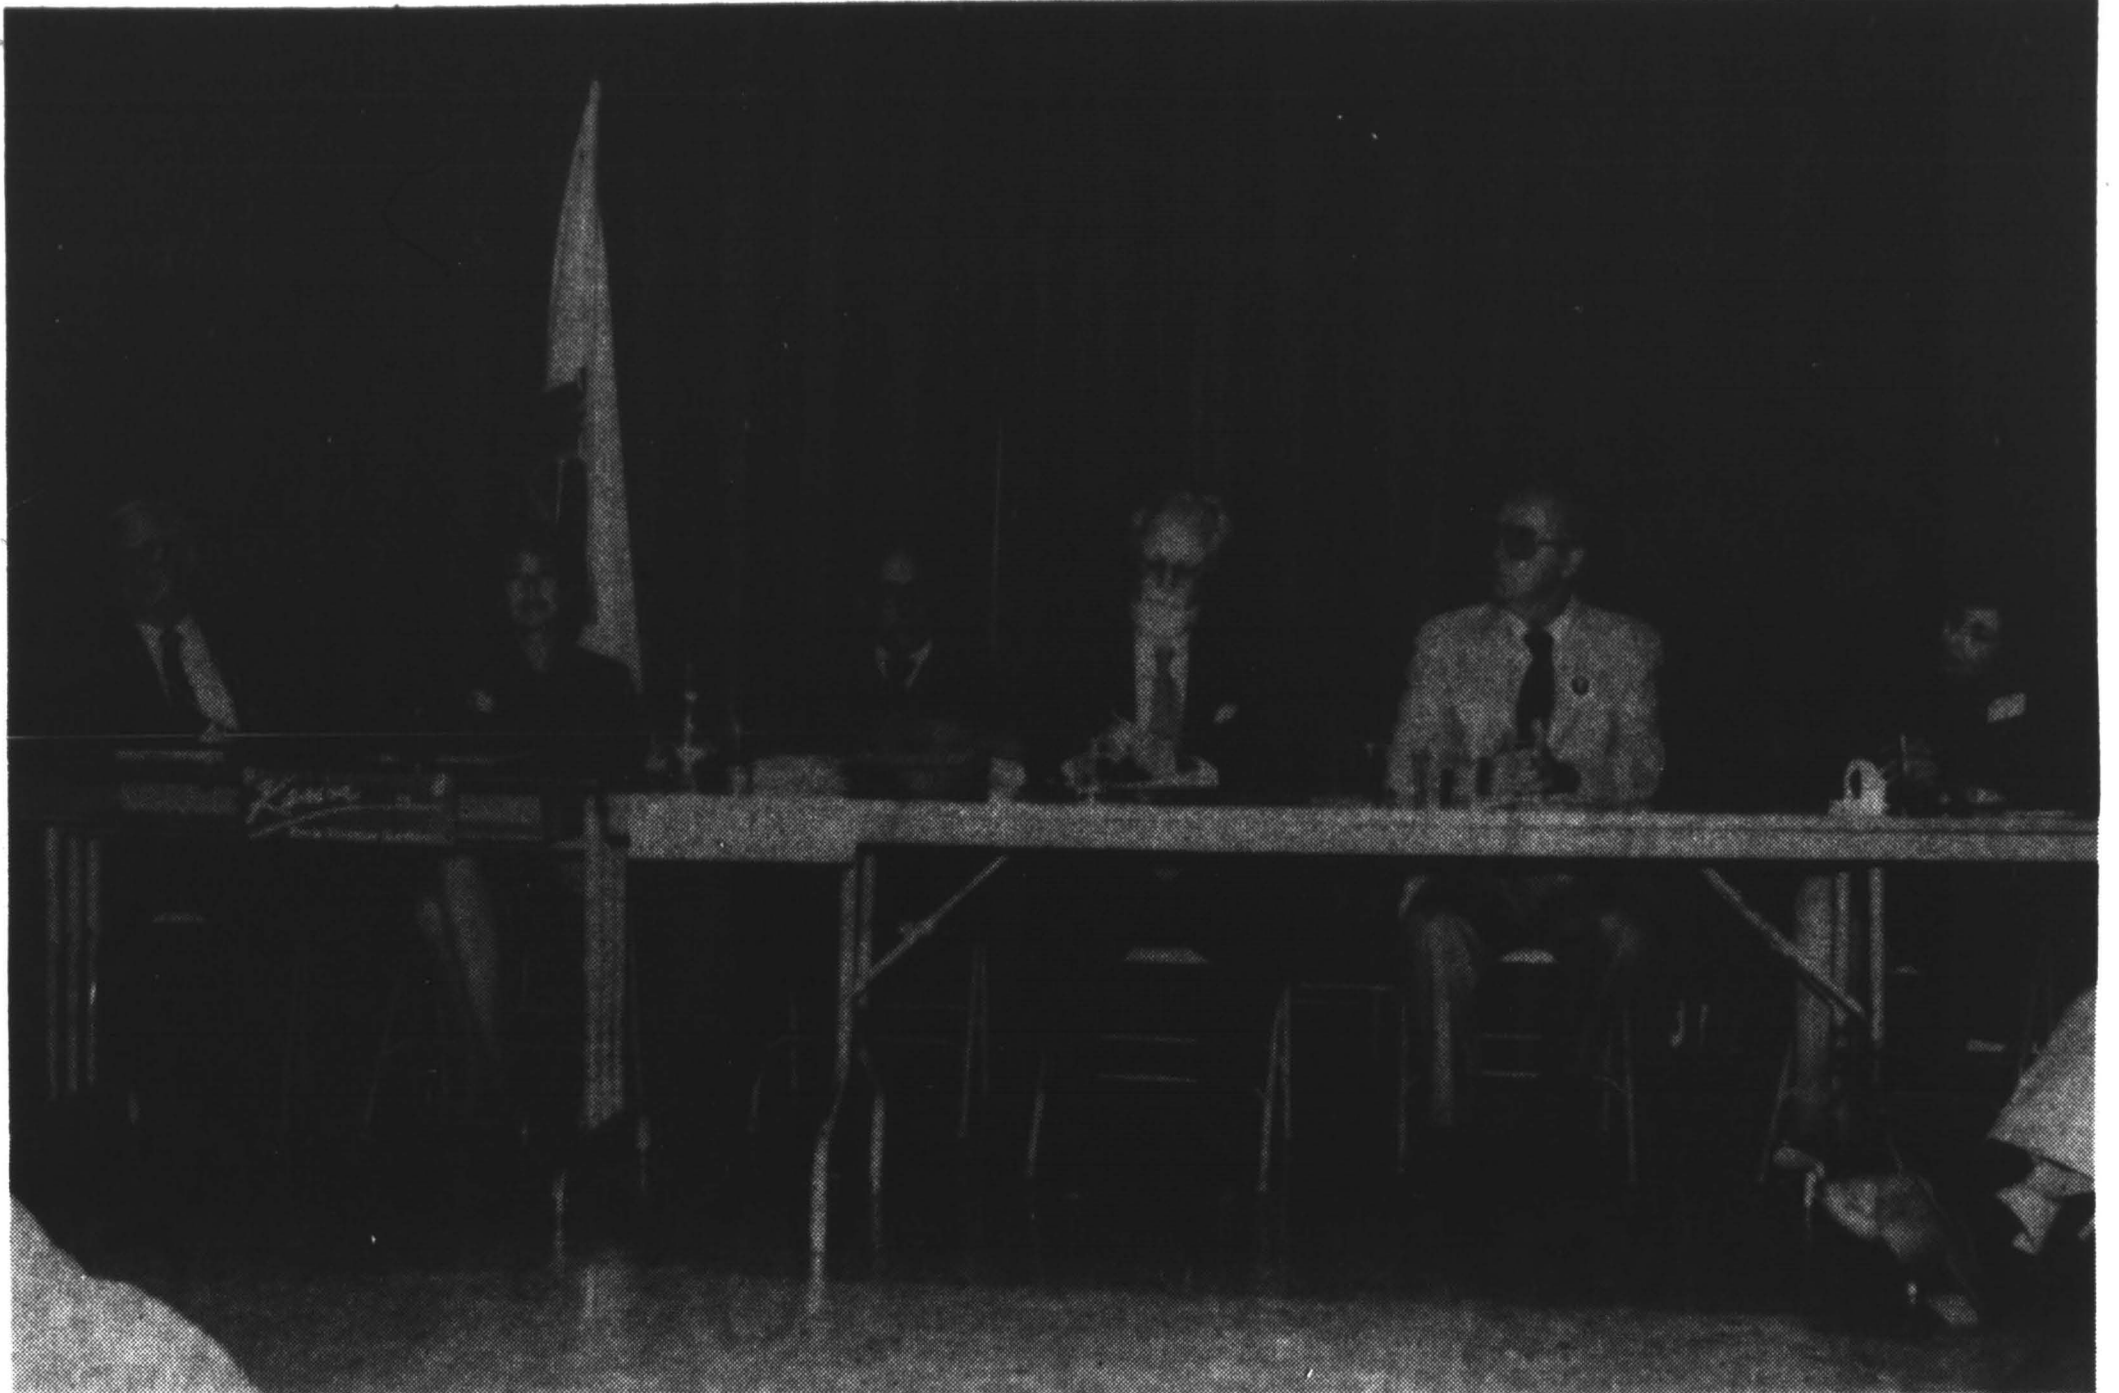

They all said they oppose control of services to restrict growth in Monterey County.

Lee was asked by Dick Heuer, a campaign worker for Mrs. Strasser Kauffman and a Monterey Peninsula Water Management District director, to clarify his statements that a radical coalition attempting to "grasp control" of county government supports the Carmel Valley woman. "Does that make me a radical?" Heuer asked.

Gardner responded that the truck used by Mrs. Strasser Kauffman to advertise her candidacy is owned by a "member of (the) coalition" who last year was elected to the water management district.

He did not identify the coalition member, but the truck is owned by John Williams of Carmel Highlands. Williams, Heuer and Patricia Bernardi were all elected to the water board; their names were on a billboard mounted on Williams' truck during the water board campaign.

Gardner complained that Williams does not believe a new dam should be built on Carmel River and that the motto of the slate of three water district candidates — "Don't let developers design a dam" — was, in Williams' case, "certainly subterfuge, certainly misrepresenting his position."

CANDIDATES FOR Fifth District Monterey County Supervisor discussed rolling billboards, radical coalitions, dams, highways and low-cost housing May 15 in Tularcitos Elementary School during a can-

Karin Strasser Kauffman, Ed Lee, Howard Brunn and Dortha Roesler. (Photograph by Joe Livernois.)

Again, Mrs. Roesler asserted that coalitions have ruined efforts by county residents to widen Highway 68. "To me, they're radicals," she said. "They filibuster meetings and ask stupid questions. There may be good coalitions, but I haven't seen one."

"None of us want to cut services," Mrs. Strasser Kauffman said. "I opposed Measure A, so why even bring (the coalition issue) up?"

EVEN WHEN it appeared there was a clear division on a pertinent issue among the candidates, it was found to be a mirage.

For instance, Gardner asserted that inclusionary housing and the Monterey County Housing Authority "won't solve" the need for housing among low- and moderate-income families. Instead, he said, "government should get the hell out of the way and let people build."

But when Mrs. Strasser Kauffman announced that Gardner lived in Portola Vista, a government-subsidized housing project in Monterey, Gardner said he did not intend to criticize the housing authority.

Still, he said he believes low-income housing cannot be constructed on the large lot sizes on which much of Monterey County is zoned.

"There will be no low-cost housing with a master plan that won't allow developments

Lee described 'radicals' as the type of person who supported Measure A, a controversial county-wide ballot proposition that would have left land use policies up to voters, two years ago.

like Del Mesa Carmel," he said.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman said she believes the inclusionary housing ordinance, which requires developers of subdivisions to set aside 15 percent of their units for low-cost housing, should be enforced.

She also said in-lieu fees, which allow developers to pay the housing authority for housing rather than building the homes themselves, should be abolished and that developers should not be given the opportunity to build the low-cost housing in areas geographically removed from their main projects.

Lee said the county should work closely with the private sector to encourage low-cost housing. He said the cheaper homes should be built "closer to job centers" in Monterey County, which, he said, may force the county to "modify its concepts about (building) density."

Brunn said the county needs innovative solutions to meet low-cost housing needs of Monterey County. For instance, he said the county needs to locate "affordable land" and provide incentives for developers to build affordable homes.

Mrs. Roesler said cheaper housing should be encouraged by the county planning staff. "They won't give anyone a permit to build a house," she said.

She said she spent several hours in the planning department lobby several weeks ago and watched "frustrated people tearing their hair out" because of the "red tape the planning department put them through. It just burns me up."

She also said the city of Carmel and the city of Monterey purposely avoid construction of low-cost housing.

City-wide recreation program gears up

REGISTRATION is underway for the first-ever city-sponsored recreation program to be offered June 18 through Aug. 24.

The program — offered in conjunction with the Carmel Foundation and the Carmel Unified School District — will include day-long child care activities, tennis, volleyball and basketball clinics, arts and crafts, and swimming for senior citizens.

The summer program is open to all area residents; however non-Carmel city residents must pay $5 more per class. City residents also have first priority for the classes.

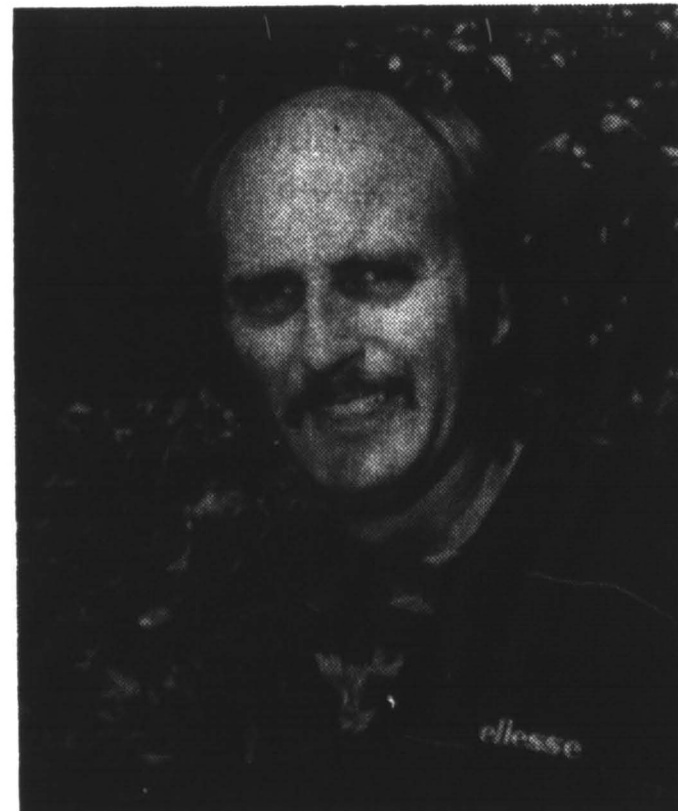

The programs are for students younger than 17 and seniors older than 60. Some of the programs have two sessions and will start and end on different dates.

Registration now is underway from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. until June 18 at Carmel River School, southeast corner of Monte Verde Street and 15th Avenue. After June 18, registration is open from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Special Saturday registration will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on June 2, 9, 16 and July 14.

Parents or guardians must register their children. Proof of residency also is required. Fees will be charged based on the activity.

Registration for the free senior (ages 60 and over) swim program will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Carmel Foundation, east side of Lincoln Street between Eighth and Ninth Avenues.

The program is offered in conjunction with the school district summer school on basic skills. Students can take district classes and then spend the rest of the day with the recreation activities.

There also is an extended day care program from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Parents can register their children for recreation activities and then fill the gaps with the day care program.

Supervisor Steve Taylor hopes that successful summer activities will lead to an expanded program for all ages this fall. Taylor, a Carmel River School teacher, was hired by City Administrator Doug Schmitz to supervise the summer program.

The city council this fall is to review the success of the recreation activities and determine whether it should be expanded to a year-round program.

Working closely with Taylor will be William Rand, school district superintendent; Chuck Phillips, head of the district adult school program; Betty Plank, Carmel Foundation executive director; and Ken White, recreation committee chairman.

Eight candidates vie for two planning board seats

THERE ARE eight candidates — including the two incumbents — for appointment to the Carmel Planning Commission.

Incumbents John Logan and Richard Barrett are up for re-appointment to the planning commission. Their terms expire at the end of May.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last week she is uncertain when she will make a decision on her appointments. Appointments to the four-year terms must be confirmed by the city council.

Logan and Barrett said last week they do not actively seek re-appointment, but will serve another term at the request of the mayor.

Barrett added that he would like to be appointed to the proposed design review committee.

The design review committee plan is now under study by the city. The committee would be responsible for design review of buildings and signs. Thus, the planning commission could spend more time on development of long-range planning policy.

Logan, a hydrologist, was appointed in 1979 to fill the unexpired term of Les Gross. He was re-appointed to a full term in 1980.

Barrett, an architect, was appointed in 1982 to fill the vacancy created when Robert Stephenson was elected to the city council.

The other applicants for the two commission posts are: Joyce Wright, a cultural commissioner; Anne Woolworth, former member of the General Plan Advisory Committee; Gerald DeSilva, part-owner of the Bill Dodge Gallery; Patti Curnow, an artist; Larry Greenwood, a geologist; and Dorrie Hammond, whose husband Gene is a current planning commissioner.

Sunset Center plans 20th birthday

THE 20TH ANNIVERSARY celebration of Sunset Center, scheduled June 14, 15 and 16, promises to be a flavorful event in the finest Carmel tradition.

The celebration will showcase the local talents that have been displayed in Sunset Center since the old Sunset Elementary School was turned into the focal point for Carmel culture two decades ago.

Because the city has encouraged a cultural environment with financial assistance, "many organizations have offered their talents and time to make this celebration a thanksgiving for 20 years of city service to the community," according to Jean White, chairwoman of the anniversary committee and a Carmel Cultural and Community Commission member.

Local artists, musicians, singers, performers, athletes and — yes — politicians, all of whom have used Sunset Center to pursue their respective careers, are scheduled to present their talents during the three-day event.

In fact, the list of participants in the celebration reads like the Who's Who in Carmel cultural and civic endeavors.

In addition, the former students, teachers and administrators of Sunset Elementary School will get together for a reunion June 16.

The celebration begins at 1:30 p.m. June 14 on the Sunset Center Theater Stage with opening ceremonies to feature Carmel photographer Cole Weston, who was also the first Sunset Center director.

He and other subsequent directors, cultural commissioners and city officials will describe the "tremendous growth that's taken place" in the cultural enrichment of Carmel in the past two decades, according to Mrs. White.

The oral history will be followed by a children's choir led by Ann Welchner at 2:30 p.m.

A presentation by the Children's Experimental Theater, directed by Marcia Hovick, will follow at 5 p.m. on the theater stage. Ms. Hovick has been director of the children's theater group for 20 years.

ON FRIDAY, June 15, the list of events is highlighted by an "Old Timers' Round Table," in which pioneer Carmelites will trade anecdotes and historical trivia in Carpenter Hall at 3 p.m.

The event will be taped and kept in Sunset Center archives.

SUNSET CENTER has attracted crowds since the city established it as the center of cultural endeavors two decades ago, when the former Sunset Elementary School was purchased by city officials. A three-day 20th anniversary celebration in honor of the center is scheduled June 14, 15 and 16.

The round table discussion will be followed by a slide presentation of early Carmel.

Later that evening, at 8 p.m., Carpenter Hall will be the site of recitation of the poetry of Robinson Jeffers, whose influence was strongly felt in the early days of the community.

Ms. Hovick, former city councilman David Hughes and former poet in residence at Jeffers' Tor House John Dotson will recite Jeffers' Carmel-inspired poetry.

Though all events during the anniversary celebration are free, Mrs. White said, the poetry reading is among the events that require tickets for admission, according to Mrs. White. Tickets for any event can be picked up at Sunset Center or by mailing a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Sunset Center, Box 5066, Carmel 93921.

Also at 8 p.m. June 15, The Plus Fours, a barbershop quartet, and Jazz Ltd. will perform on the Sunset Theater Stage. Tickets are also required for admittance to that performance.

Earlier in the day, at 5 p.m., classical guitarist Terrence Farrell will appear on the theater stage for a ticket-required performance.

Members of the Suzuki Children's Music program out of Sunset Center will perform at 1 p.m. Friday in Carpenter Hall.

On Saturday afternoon, the Sunset School reunion, which has generated a lot of enthusiasm in Carmel, is scheduled.

"We already have more than 200 people pre-registered for it," said Mrs. White.

The reunion required a committee of its own to organize and the committee has been able to raise more than $1,000 to put on the get-together.

LACY FAIA, a Sunset School alumna, is assembling an "avenue of memories" that will include old photographs of the school and school events, as well as school memorabilia. The trip down Memory Lane will be open for returning schoolmates concurrently with the reunion from 3 to 5 p.m.

Skip Lloyd, a Carmel attorney and son of beloved Carmel city councilman and editor of the Carmel Pine Cone, the late Frank Lloyd, will serve as master of ceremonies for the reunion.

Sam Farr, who attended Sunset School and who is a favorite son state Assemblyman from Carmel, will head the welcoming committee for the reunion with his wife, Sherry, another Sunset graduate.

Also on Sunday, members of the Monterey County Symphony will assemble a chamber group for a ticket-required 8 p.m. performance on the theater stage.

Earlier on the stage, the representatives from the area Music Teachers Association will perform a recital at 2 p.m.

The slide show of early Carmel also will be presented Saturday at 11 a.m. in Carpenter Hall.

And Ric Masten, a minstrel, songwriter and storyteller from Garrapata Canyon who tours the nation with his show, is scheduled to put on a 2 p.m. performance in Carpenter Hall.

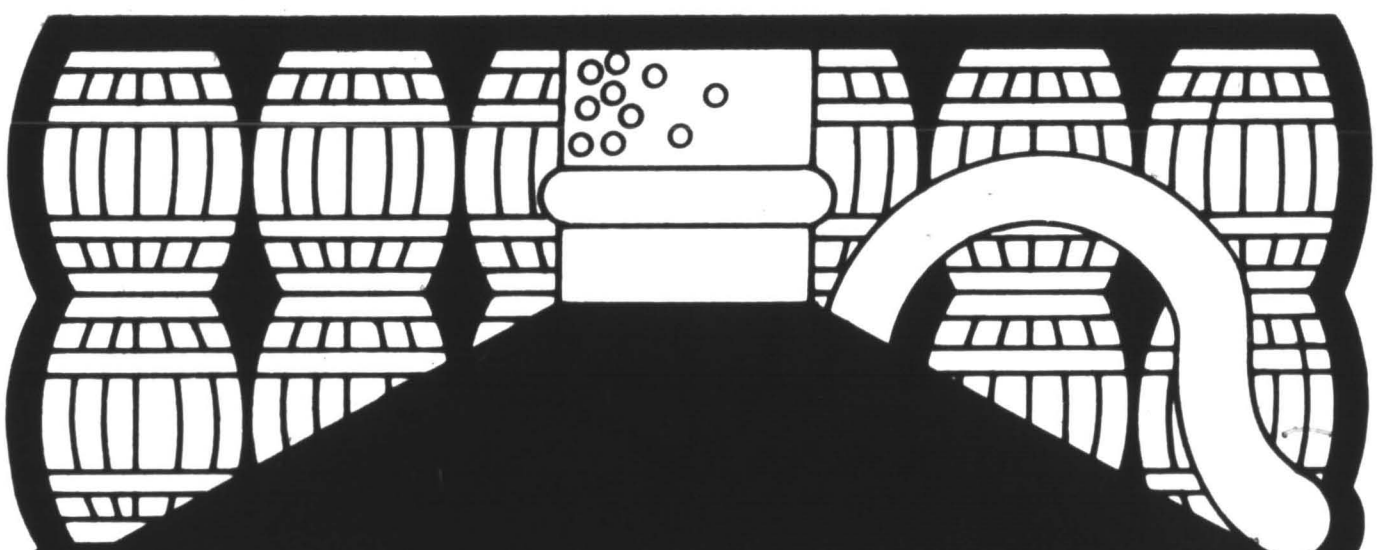

"Ric had a New York performance he canceled so he could come to this," Mrs. White said.

Tickets are required for the Masten concert.

Also on Saturday, those quietly intent artists who use Room 15, tucked away down in the far south corner of the center, will open the studio to the public.

Participants of the Scottish and Greek dance classes at Sunset will also perform Saturday at 3 p.m. and 1 p.m. respectively in Room 10.

Members of the reunion committee include Marion and Glenn Leidig, Mrs. Faia, Howard Brunn, Mary Littlefield, Pat Sipple, Pam Klaumann, Nancy Whitacre and Buz Schulte.

City council to review new planning measures in a special meeting

By MICHAEL GARDNER

ARGYLL CAMPBELL probably never dreamed that his simple 1929 ordinance would become the focal point in the current Carmel City Council struggle to stem the tourist tide.

When then city attorney Campbell wrote the ordinance (No. 96 passed and adopted June 5, 1929) Carmel was considered to be an artists' colony that also catered to the visiting professors of Stanford University.

'However, as California is the garden of America, so, to me, is Carmel its Eden. Here the pines and hills and waters meet, and the north and south join hands under skies as blue as Italy boasts.'

Today, Campbell's words still loom over the Carmel City Council chambers at a time when residents are trying to fight back against the tourist invasion and the related T-shirt and souvenir shops:

"The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea is hereby determined to be primarily, essentially and predominately a residential city, wherein business and commerce have in the past, are now, and are proposed to be in the future, subordinated to its residential character."

Campbell's words strongly influenced the 1983 Carmel General Plan, and its subsequently proposed implementing ordinances are to be reviewed by the city council at a special meeting at 4 p.m. May 24 at city hall.

Campbell's son, retired Monterey County Superior Court Judge Gordon Campbell, served on the citizens committee that helped develop the general plan. The younger Campbell freely quoted his father's words during debate on recommendations for proposed business controls.

The late Argyll Campbell was the third city attorney for Carmel; he served his term from 1922 to 1937.

He was a frequent traveler, but always looked forward to his return to the small seaside town. Campbell, like many lovers of Carmel, was sometimes at a loss for words to describe the natural beauty.

His inability to do justice in words to Carmel's beauty is reflected in one of the columns he wrote for the Pine Cone before he became city attorney.

"On my way here last summer the Carmel motor stage chugged its way to the crown of a hill, swung a sharp turn and brought to view through the spaces of a forest a bay view as that of Naples (Italy) and an altogether impossible sunset," Campbell wrote in a story published Feb. 3, 1915.

"The unexpected beauty of the scene held the passengers silent for a moment; then an enthusiastic young woman exclaimed: 'Isn't it too grand for anything?'"

'ADORABLE!' agreed her companion.

"These two young women, no doubt sensed the loveliness they looked upon but were unable adequately to translate their realization into words.

"I find myself hampered by a similar ineptness of expression in endeavoring to give my impressions of Carmel.

"The cool filter of ocean fog tempers the downbeat of the sun in summer when the inland swelters in the heat. In the winter, if we may call it such, the fog withdraws to the edge of the sea to take a colorful part in the indescribable sunsets, leaving Carmel to be flooded with the unhindered rays of the sun.

"Here is the verdure of the north without

A JEALOUS tyke watched with envy as mom gave younger sister a bite of ice cream while the family enjoyed a warm day in Carmel. Ice cream eating is one of the favorite pastimes of tourists as they stroll the streets of Carmel. But the city, through its its storms, and the warmth of the south without its aridity. Of all California it was Carmel that the sweet souled Serra (Father Junipero Serra) and those of us who followed here will understand," the column concluded.

Retired Judge Gordon Campbell, who has a reputation as a strongly pro-resident, questions whether his father would repeat such words in today's downtown atmosphere of tour buses, parking problems, Carmel T-shirts and franchise cookie outfits.

But the current Carmel City Council recognizes that times change, especially over half a century.

This council, which labels itself as pro-resident, claims the pendulum has swung too far in the direction of business.

The council merely wants to keep business and residential interests at an even keel.

And it appears that the long hours of work put in by the planning commission and city staff may have produced a workable series of initial ordinances that will satisfy most residents and merchants alike.

The two key issues that seem to concern most of the commercial property owners are the boundary changes and the requirements for a conditional use permit for certain shops in the commercial-service and residential-commercial zones.

At the May 24 meeting, assistant planning director Diane White is to present responses to those concerns raised by business people at previous meetings.

On the boundary changes, Mrs. White said a few of the commercial property owners are worried about downzoning from a central-commercial to a service-commercial zone.

THE LEIDIG family and Irene Day have been most vocal before the council on the downzoning.

The Leidigs protest the change from central-commercial to service-commercial for their Mobil Service Station property on the northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Seventh Avenue.

Mrs. Day opposes a similar downzoning from C-1-C to C-1-S for her property on the west side of Mission Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues. A house currently is on the site.

Property zoned commercial is inherently more valuable because it can be developed as retail shops. The central-commercial zone allows the more tourist-oriented — and higher rent-paying — businesses.

Mrs. White explained that the commercial service district does allow retail uses. The only prohibitions are art galleries, jewelry stores implementing ordinances to the 1983 Carmel General Plan, wants to control take-out eating establishments such as ice cream shops, cookie shops and bakeries. (Photo by Marilyn Owen.)

and gift shops. But the Leidigs and Mrs. Day could open a restaurant, full-service bakery, clothing store or shoe boutique.

And the service-commercial zone does not allow retail shops on the second story. The second levels are restricted to office, service use or apartments, under the proposed ordinances.

Business people also are concerned about the threat of amortization. But the draft ordinances do not mention amortization of non-conforming uses.

Mrs. White pointed out that the general plan includes a policy that the city identify non-conforming uses and determine whether the businesses should be amortized or allowed to continue with a conditional use permit.

Asked when the city last amortized a business, Mrs. White replied: "I don't think we ever have."

Mrs. White added that staff will report at the May 24 meeting on the number of non-conforming uses in the city so the council will know how many businesses will be affected by the new policies.

But a policy on amortization probably will not be developed until later, she said.

Basically, the new ordinances are designed to contain tourist-oriented businesses in the central commercial zone, primarily along Ocean Avenue.

And to have further controls on those uses, the implementing ordinances propose a "village preservation district" for Ocean Avenue that would require businesses to obtain a conditional use permit before opening.

A conditional use permit gives the city an opportunity to attach stringent conditions, such as merchandise, hours of operation and displays.

Besides the reference to amortization, the city apparently has dropped two other controversial policies in the originally proposed implementing ordinances.

The first was a reference to placing a limit on the number of certain businesses, such as restaurants, jewelry stores and art galleries.

The city also has amended the original policies toward second story shops.

At first the planning commission had under consideration a plan to allow retail uses on the second story of buildings in the central-commercial zone only.

Under that policy only apartments would be permitted on the second floors in the service commercial district.

That policy has been changed to allow service uses and office space on the second story of buildings in the service-commercial district.

Dirty Harry shot down by Carmel City Council

THE FATE of actor Clint Eastwood's proposed downtown complex is uncertain after the Carmel City Council unanimously shot down his plans May 15.

Architect George Brook-Kothlow used a 45-minute slide show of the various architectural styles in Carmel to try to convince the council that the modern-style building is compatible with the character of the village.

But the council was unconvinced and determined that the proposed two-story retail

THIS VACANT lot between the Hog's Breath and Shell Fisher Gallery would be replaced as part of actor Clint Eastwood's new two-story retail and office complex on scale version of the existing proposal, redesign the project or drop plans altogether.

Brook-Kothlow proposed a modern design for the horseshoe-shaped, two-story retail and office complex on the west side of San Carlos Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

The project is to be constructed between the Serra Building and Eastwood's Hog's Breath Inn. There would be a courtyard in the center of the horseshoe and a new passageway would lead to the Hog's Breath.

San Carlos Street. The council on May 15 rejected the proposed building as being too bulky and too high. (Photo by Michael Gardner.)

The building would replace the Shell Fisher Gallery building, the Nishi Nursery and a vacant lot now used for storage.

The planning commission narrowly approved the scheme on a 4-3 vote Feb. 22. Supporters liked the concept and ruled that the necessary 18-inch height variance is trivial. Opponents complained of the mass and the height of the building.

Council members David Maradei and Helen Arnold appealed that planning commission approval to the full council.

Maradei and Mrs. Arnold cited as reasons for their appeal the closeness of the commission vote, the size and bulk of the building, and the "out of residential character" design of the project.

At the outset of the May 15 council meeting City Atty. Don Freeman asked Maradei and Mrs. Arnold whether they thought they could keep an open mind on the proposal.

"If your mind is already made up then it may be appropriate for you to step down," Freeman said.

Mrs. Arnold replied that "I would certainly try to have an open mind." But Maradei said he has a "commitment" against the project and stepped out of the room.

BROOK-KOTHLOW presented the council with a slide show that depicted the various architectural styles in Carmel, which display everything from Spanish to French influences.

But the slide show failed to sway the council. Councilman Robert Stephenson was the most vocal opponent.

Stephenson protested the potential increase in traffic congestion, the height of the building and the mass as seen from the public way.

"I was not terribly impressed by his slide show," he said. "Some of those buildings I consider quite ugly."

Stephenson called the size of the building "pretty imposing."

Councilman James Wright agreed with Stephenson. However, Wright did call the building an "attractive design."

Mrs. Arnold said the project is "a lovely, lovely building," but thought the size should be scaled down.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend agreed. She called the building "handsome" but "obtrusive."

In other action, the council:

- Referred to the traffic committee a request to ban parking on the east side of San Antonio Street north of Ocean Avenue.

Residents on that street petitioned the council for the parking ban. They said the irregularly parked cars caused traffic and safety problems.

- Adopted a resolution to urge the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to keep Monterey Bay on a list of candidates for designation as a national marine sanctuary.

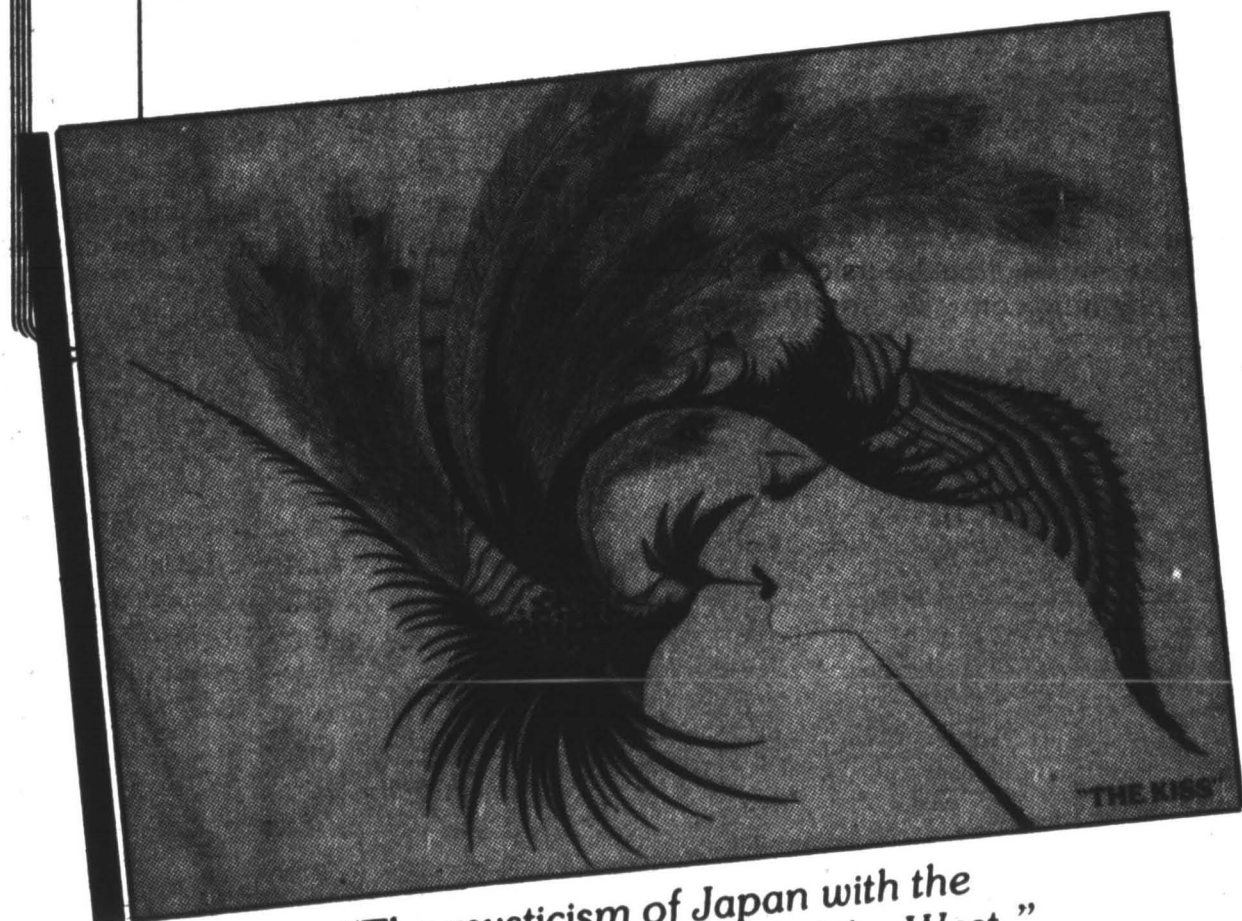

If Monterey Bay becomes a marine sanctuary, it would effectively prohibit offshore oil drilling, and the over-fishing of certain species.

The resolution argues that the bay is "the habitat of the threatened species California Sea Otter and the only American breeding grounds of the endangered species Northern Elephant Seal."

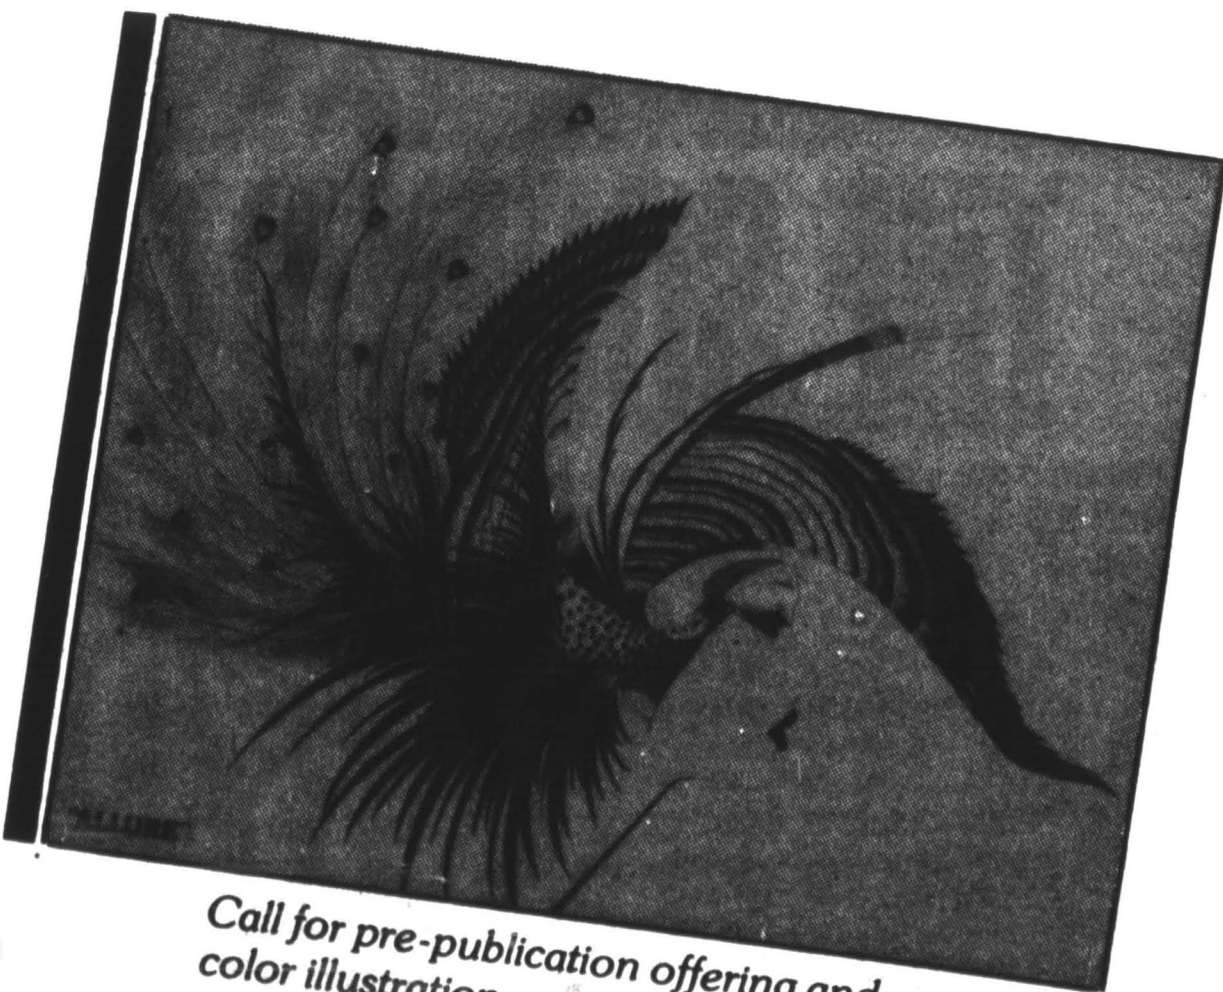

- Approved use of Carmel Beach for the fifth annual Sunshine Freestyle Surfabout on June 16-17.

- Directed staff to investigate ways to limit the size of delivery trucks. The action was in response to citizen complaints that the large trucks damage trees and create other traffic safety problems.

33 percent sanitary rate hike posed

By JOE LIVERNOIS

CARMEL SANITARY DISTRICT directors proposed a 33 percent increase in user fees last week when they met in Carmel City Hall.

The district board has scheduled a June 21 public hearing on the rate increase, which would raise annual sewage disposal fees for residents from $72 to $96.

Board members said the rate increase is needed because in recent years fees collected from users pay for almost half of the cost of maintaining the district.

The district collects about $666,000 in user fees annually with the $72-a-year rate and operating expenditures in fiscal year 1984-85 are expected to reach $1.2 million.

In previous years, the district has been able to meet its budget with the help of interest earned on its general operating, replacement capital reserve and construction funds. The district also receives about $250,000 in subvention funds to special districts from Monterey County.

District president Kenneth McGinnis said the district should not be in a position of depending on interest and subvention money.

Zambory said the district probably will not be able to depend on interest income in future years as it has in the past because it will need to pay for items in its plant improvement project that were not eligible for federal and state grants.

"Interest earned on the construction fund is expected to decrease considerably because of the district's projected share of the (improvement) project scheduled for completion in late 1985," according to the district revenue analysis released last week.

The district is in its sixth month of construction on the $6.7 million improvement project. The district is liable for 12.5 percent of the construction cost and is also liable for plant improvement works that were not eligible for federal and state grants.

The rate increase proposal was also supported by the two other district board members. Director Paul Beemer was absent. "I think the raise is justified," said Director David Tedrow. "After six years with no increase, it is probably due."

"The $8 rate will bring us closer to our operating cost," said Director John Floyd. "From 1978 to 1984, everything has gone up so much, but not in this district."

"I think it's a step in the proper direction," said McGinnis.

The proposal to increase fees coincided with the presentation of the 1984-85 budget.

The $1.18 million operating budget is a $136,000 increase over the 1983-84 budget, according to Kloefer.

The major increases include a $38,000 anticipated increase in salaries and a $25,000 increase in the cost of hauling sludge from the district plant to the Marina landfill disposal site.

The district will also consider adoption of its budget after a public hearing scheduled to follow the public hearing on the proposed rate increase.

"It's like a camel living off its hump," he said. "That's exactly what we're doing with this district financially."

Michael Zambory, district manager, said the $6 residential rate was established in 1978 and has not increased since then.

"It should be that the user fees approximate more closely the cost of providing services in case the plug is pulled on something else," Zambory said.

Since the district provides services to 6,050 homes, it derives most of its operating capital from its basic fee to residents. But rates to all other users, such as restaurants, hotels and motels, businesses and laundromats would also be increased, Zambory said.

District accountant James Kloefer noted that the consumer price index has increased more than 55 percent since 1978 and, if the district raised rates to meet the CPI, they could ask for a $4 increase.

Lumber company wants to harvest near hermitage

THE TRANQUILITY of the Immaculate Heart Hermitage in Big Sur could be threatened by the hearty presence of the bearded Scarborough Lumber Co. man.

To the chagrin of the brothers and friars at the hermitage, located about one-half mile south of Lucia, Scarborough Lumber officials have applied for a redwood timber harvest permit with the California Department of Forestry for 35 of the 80 acres the Santa Cruz County-based firm owns adjacent to the hermitage.

A 7 p.m. June 5 hearing on the permit application has been scheduled by the California Department of Forestry in the public health services room of the Monterey County Courthouse, 1200 Agujito Rd., Monterey.

The brothers at the hermitage oppose the proposed logging operation because of the increased number of logging trucks that would traverse the road shared by the company and the hermitage, according to Bruno Barnhart, a friar at the monastery.

Barnhart said the hermitage has hired Zad Leavy, a Big Sur attorney, to fight Scarborough, which owns 80 acres near the hermitage.

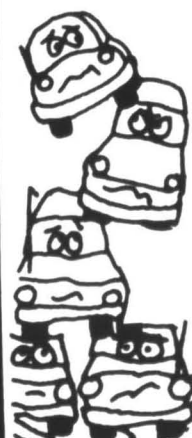

A technical hearing, in which public agencies with concerns and proposed conditions to the permit may speak, is scheduled May 30 in the California Department of Forestry Regional Office on Garden Road in Monterey.

David Soho, a regional officer for the department of forestry, said a tentative "decision date" on the permit application has been tentatively set for June 7. He said written testimony will be accepted until then and should be directed to him at the California Department of Forestry, 2221 Garden Rd., Monterey, Calif. 93940.

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL students got a close look at drugs brought to the school library by Monterey County Sheriff's deputies May 7 during a drug-identifying seminar sponsored by We Care, an organization of Carmel parents. The students were told to look, but not to touch. (Photograph by Joe Livernois.)

Carmel High students get first-hand look at drugs

By JOE LIVERNOIS

THERE ARE DRUGS on the Carmel High School campus. And, last week, Monterey County law enforcement officials brought more drugs to the school.

Sheriff's investigators brought the drugs — marijuana, heroin, cocaine, PCP — to alert parents of the telltale signs of drug use.

The presentation, which included a slide show, was sponsored by the "We Care" organization recently established by parents of Carmel High School in an attempt to battle drug and alcohol abuse by their children.

In contrast to the great turnout We Care had at its informational meeting a month earlier, only a handful of parents showed up for the presentation last week in the Carmel High library.

It was suggested at the earlier meeting that representatives from law enforcement agencies bring samples of drugs to the campus so parents can recognize them if they find them on or about their child.

So Monterey County Sheriff's representatives Phil Hill and Jim Smith lugged three large glass-enclosed boxes full of drug samples to the campus library May 7. Carmel Police investigator Pete Poitras and a representative from the Monterey County District Attorney's Office also showed up to answer questions.

When the meeting opened, about two dozen high school students outnumbered the 10 parents and high school teachers in the audience.

Poitras spoke at the earlier We Care meeting. "I apparently scared some parents," he joked. "I guess I may have scared them so bad they aren't here today."

Nevertheless, Poitras did answer questions about the realities of enforcing drug laws. Kids caught with less than an ounce of marijuana for personal consumption might be cited but their parents are rarely called. Most

When committee meets

We Care sponsors two weekly "parent support groups" designed to help parents who may be "having problems" with teenagers they suspect may be using drugs and alcohol, according to We Care official Harriet Rowntree.

The support group meets at 9:30 a.m. every Wednesday in the Carmel Presbyterian Church on Ocean and Junipero and at 7 p.m. every Wednesday in Room 9 of Carmel High School.

"It's a drop-in situation," said Mrs. Rowntree.

In addition, a planning meeting to coordinate other We Care activities will be held within several weeks, though no date has yet been set.

parents Carmel police contact don't seem to care, he said. Sometimes, the police just confiscate the drugs and deliver a stern lecture.

But if a minor is caught with more than an ounce of pot or with more exotic substances, it is a felony offense and the kid gets hauled off to the police station for booking and, eventually, to juvenile court.

WHEN POITRAS was finished, the sheriff's department turned off the lights and turned on the slide presentation. The slide presentation, prepared by a men's service organization, featured images of the different drugs and narcotics, their nicknames, what they do to the mind and body, and their probable side effects.

The score to the slide show included an adult interpretation of hard rock and a drumbeat that underscored the somewhat malignant voice of the narrator.

As the slide show continued, most of the students filtered out of the library.

When it was over, Hill and Smith answered a few more questions. They told the group that, unlike the Carmel police, they never let a kid caught with less than an ounce of marijuana get away without a citation.

On the other hand, Smith said the Sheriff's Department is understaffed and, as a result, "we don't really focus in on your kids. We focus on the dealer."

Hill suggested that parents can help the situation by "keeping an eye on your children." If the child shows "erratic behavior or change," chances are the kid is on drugs, he said.

He also noted that drug dealers on high school campuses are often hard to track down because they are not always the low-life type one normally suspects of "pushing" drugs.

Often, a high school dealer is a neat, clean-cut kid who is trying to earn a quick buck.

Nevertheless, a parent noted, "that neat, clean-cut kid is still the kid who may have put my kid down the road."

Joyce Underdown, a Carmel parent who moderated the presentation last week, opened the meeting by telling the students present that We Care parents "aren't a bunch of hysterical parents out to spoil all your fun."

She said it is important that parents are aware of "what's going on with our kids" and to find out about activities on campus "we're not exposed to and which we certainly were not exposed to when we were teenagers."

She said the We Care organization intends to promote "alternative parties" to the popular weekend "keggers" and to establish an ongoing "Safe Ride" program, in which sober teens drive their drunken counterparts home.

Carmel High School teacher

Swim coach Walthour honored for decades of dedicated service

By MICHAEL GARDNER

BOB WALTHOUR probably should have been born a fish, he loves the water so much. But he wasn't — fortunately for Carmel High School.

The Walthour family van sports a bumper sticker that says "swimming keeps kids clean." And that is the philosophy of the coach, teacher and friend to Carmel High School students for the past 20 years.

This two-decade commitment to future generations has earned Walthour the annual Allen Griffin Award as teacher of the year on the Monterey Peninsula.

Walthour and the other three nominees from other school districts were honored in a ceremony Friday, May 11.

"I was surprised. I had never really given it much thought before," said Walthour. Other Carmel High School teachers previously nominated were Lloyd Baskerville, now

'I think the kids keep me young. I think young because of my associates. I enjoy watching their progress going from not knowing to knowing.'

retired ceramics instructor; and Vic Selby, who teaches math.

"It's a rare surprise for a physical education teacher to be picked," said Walthour, who spends his lunch hours swimming and leisure time sailing.

Walthour's two-decade dedication to the bodies and minds of the future generations has earned him a tremendous respect from his students, fellow teachers and even the coaches of opposing teams.

Although Walthour is best known for his dynasty Padre girls swim team that has an almost unbelievable 103-straight dual meet wins to its credit, few know that when report cards come due his squad has a cumulative grade point average of B or better.

His commitment to the physical and mental health of the students was cited by those who wrote letters in support of Walthour's nomination for the Griffin award.

"Through my years in the Carmel area, I have been associated with Mr. Walthour as a teacher, coach and as a friend. He has had a great influence on my life, especially through my high school years," wrote four-year swim team member Kristina Neill.

"Mr. Walthour has also been a great friend to hundreds of kids, including myself. His warm personality attracts people and his knowledge in many areas brings people to him who want to learn from him," she said.

'MR. WALTHOUR is a fascinating person who always has a cheery smile and something nice to say. We're glad he's part of Carmel."

Swimmers Sheila Mullen and Emily Banks wrote that many students look up to him "as a coach as well as a fatherly figure."

"Not only did he enhance our swimming skills, but he helped us look at our other talents in our scholastic achievements," they wrote.

"Endurance, (through) which we have learned we need to be good swimmers, has carried over to our everyday lives," the letter continued.

Former school board chairman Ken White called Walthour "the kind of teacher that all schools look for when hiring."

"Bob is an outstanding teacher, for he has some abilities that many teachers don't have. He has the ability to communicate with young people on a level that makes learning an open door," White said.

"He dedicates all his time to young people and their learning of the techniques and skills that he teaches. Bob is 100 percent educator."

Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly added: "Another goal of Mr. Walthour is to have each girl strive to be the best she can be, both athletically and academically."

"He keeps a careful check on grades as the school year progresses and the cumulative grade point average of his team is higher than that of any other Carmel High School team."

Despite all the acclaim for his afternoon sailing lessons, his team's high grades, and his rapport with the students, Walthour's name is synonymous with the remarkable winning streak his girls' swim team has achieved.

Last fall the girls won number 100 and ended the Mission Trails Athletic League season at 103 in a row with promises to continue the streak next year.

The Walthour legend — written up last year in Sports Illustrated — has its roots about 40 years ago in a private Santa Monica high school.

There the young Walthour swam for one of the greatest swimming legends of all time — the late Johnny Weismuller, an Olympic gold medalist who went on to an acting career as Tarzan.

Walthour went on to star at St. Mary's College near Walnut Creek, where he received his bachelor of arts degree. He earned his master's degree in physical education from Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo.

GIRLS' SWIMMING (13 years, 13 league titles, 123-1 record) is not the only sport Walthour coaches, nor is it the only varsity team to continually win under his guidance. He has accumulated 31 league championships and 16 of his teams have gone undefeated in a season.

A look at his record in other sports shows: football, six championships in 11 years; cross country, four titles in three years; wrestling, five times second place finishers in 12 years; and track, nine league championships in 15 years.

Walthour started coaching Carmel High School sports teams in 1963 when he taught at the middle school. He joined the high school teaching staff a year later. Through the years he has taught history, geometry and remedial reading. These days he is the physical education teacher.

During a warm sunny spring day May 3 at poolside, Walthour talked to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook about teaching, the need for parental support, and the relationship between athletics and academics.

The only time Walthour appears in public without his lucky hat and sunglasses seems to be when he's thrown into the pool after an important win. The interview was no exception as he answered questions in between keeping track of the students in the pool.

Although Walthour is noted for his many victories, the wins are not what really counts, he said.

"I encourage sportsmanlike competition, as it brings out the best in my students. Striving to be the best one can be is more important than being first. If each team member strives to be the best he or she can, the team will earn its share of victories."

Walthour, at 56, said he prefers to teach because it keeps him young.

"I think the kids keep me young. I think young because of my associates," he said. "I enjoy watching their progress going from not knowing to knowing. I like being out of doors and working with the physical aspects of life."

Walthour believes in the philosophy that a healthy body helps to keep a sound mind.

"The greatest philosophers back in the times of the Greeks used to say that a good mind and a strong body are the traits of a good person."

"The two (academics and athletics) are very compatible. There is a correlation between good health and a good mind," he said.

"Happier students have a tradition of studying more. They enjoy school."

IN TODAY'S educational atmosphere of reforms and budget cuts, there still must be room for athletics, Walthour believes.

Walthour in his classes likes to stress the lifetime sports, such as swimming, tennis, sailing, and jogging.

"It leads to a happier life," he said.

Lifetime sports especially are important for those students who will enter the work force as the 1990s begin. In that decade jobs will be more stressful, but there will be increased leisure time, Walthour added.

"The 1990s are going to be more stressful because of the higher technology and skills demanded," he said. "We will have more leisure time but we will have more tension."

Because of this stress, physical education must teach young people how to take better care of their bodies through lifetime sports, he said.

Sports teams also are important because the games help "pull the school and community together, create a positive atmosphere on campus, and improve morale" among the students, he said.

He opposes the trend toward elimination of physical education as a graduation requirement. Walthour believes students should take P.E., but be allowed to choose the sport to play. Currently students only are required to take two years of physical education.

"Being active and keeping in shape is a lifetime activity. It's not just for two years."

And Walthour agrees with the recent state Supreme Court decision that prohibits school districts from imposing a fee on those who want to play after-school sports.

"I don't think charging is good. I think we should keep it free. Athletics play a very important role in the curriculum. It pulls the school together and develops pride in the school."

Walthour said even in physical education the larger class sizes and decreased programs are hurting the curriculum.

"We need smaller classes and upgrading the facilities because it is depressing for students and staff to be in shabby surroundings," he said. "We need to enlarge facilities and programs, not cut. And that all comes down to money."

But Walthour does not think that a teacher or a school is the key ingredient in education. It is the parent.

"I think parents have to support their kids in whatever activity they do," he said. "The key to education is parent involvement."

"There are some kids who I've had in sports for four years and I've wondered whether they even have a parent. Parents should be there as much as they can."

The 1984 Festival roster includes Ghosts of Thorenshield, described as a 19th Century horror story and "an enormous favorite."

Children of third and fourth grade age will perform Biddy and Elves and Come to the Fair. Fifth graders will round out two casts of The Pied Piper, which includes the text of

County to meet with angry citizens committee

Supervisor Michal Moore, instructed committee members to get together with a planning commission representative and a member of the board of supervisors before the June 5 meeting.

The object of most of the committee members' objections is the "front-loading" provision in the plan written by the planning commission.

In the master plan written by the citizens committee, a development limit of 1,100 new units is allowed during the 20-year life of the plan. To meet that number in an orderly fashion, the citizens committee determined that an average of 55 units should be "allocated" for approval by the county annually in Carmel Valley.

While the planning commission did not change the total build-out number, it did decide to allow more than 400 new lots to be established in the Valley in the first two years following approval of the plan.

Under another change recommended by the planning commission, lots — and not "units" — would be subject to allocation by the county annually. Thus, new lots would be created annually, but owners of those lots would not necessarily have to build on their lots.

The commission determined the numbers established in the plan should be retroactive to 1980, which is when the board of supervisors first adopted the document. Several months later, a Monterey County Superior Court judge ruled the plan is invalid because an environmental impact report had not been prepared first.

A moratorium on most development in the Valley also was declared. The moratorium on discretionary use permits will continue until the master plan is again adopted by the board of supervisors.

Planning commissioners agreed to the "front loading" provision in an effort to relieve developers' frustration with the moratorium.

BUT GREENWOOD, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, told supervisors the "front-loading" provision "could provide an unfair argument for scrapping the plan."

He noted that the plan calls for a review of its policies after two years. He said that since many of the policies and provisions in the plan are "untried and experimental," an intensity of development in the first two years may throw the entire plan out of whack.

"If it is unworkable in the first two years, the entire system breaks down," he said.

Greenwood added that the CVPOA board of directors "strongly urges that allocations in the first two years be limited to 55 lots per year, which is the pre-determined average. Possible increases should be considered after the mandatory review."

Review of the master plan is also a concern expressed by the city of Carmel.

Gunnar Norberg, a former Carmel mayor, read a resolution passed unanimously by the Carmel City Council the night before the supervisors' meeting that urged a periodic review of the master plan.

The city earlier asked the planning commission that provisions be made to amend the master plan after new information is discovered during the review process.

But the commission decided that new information should "be made available as a general data base" to be used by developers when they prepare environmental reviews for their individual projects.

But the city contends the commission missed the point.

In a letter to the board of supervisors read by Norberg, Carmel City Administrator Doug Schmitz said the city-proposed review program "is intended to be a testing method

THE CITIZENS ADVISORY committee that rewrote the Carmel Valley Master Plan has been given the chance to convey its opinions about the plan one last time before the Monterey County Board of Supervisors considers the plan at its June 5 meeting. A meeting between members of the committee, a planning commissioner and a supervisor will take place within the next two weeks to ensure that the plan is carried forward in the manner envisioned.

"Without an evaluation of the plan on a periodic basis, the program as described by the planning commission would be a meaningless exercise of data gathering."

NORBERG AND SCHMITZ reminded the board that the city of Carmel prompted the court action that resulted in the invalidation of the 1980 master plan and the moratorium on development.

The League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula joined the city and the advisory committee to criticize the planning commission and its handling of the master plan.

"The commission has marred (the) commendable action (of the citizens committee) by yielding to pressure from development interests on some important issues," said Jean Bleick, a league member who read from a letter written by league president Lorita Fisher.

The league agrees the "front-loading" system should be abandoned. It also suggested the board "consider a ceiling on the size of new subdivisions," Mrs. Bleick said.

"We feel that very large subdivisions are inappropriate in the Valley and the continuing problems that have arisen in connection with the Carmel Valley Ranch should be a warning against another such commitment."

The league joined the CVPOA board to urge supervisors to remove a "plan line" on the Carmel Valley Master Plan map that would allow eventual construction of a road after Corky Matthews (left) and two other committee members complained that substantial master plan changes were made by the planning commission without committee consultation. between Carmel Valley Road near the Rancho Canada golf course and Highway 68 near the Laguna Seca golf course.

The planning commission included the plan line in its recommendations after the master plan advisory committee recommended the county scrap plans to build the road, which would be called Canada de la Segunda Road.

"With the present plans for the Hatton Canyon Freeway, the Canada de la Segunda issue need not be revived," said Greenwood in his letter to the board from the CVPOA.

He noted that the road has been "ruled out by every committee appointed to study it ... on the grounds of adverse environmental impacts and absence of justification."

CARL HOOPER of Bestor Engineers Inc. testified before supervisors in defense of Canada de la Segunda Road.

"There is an absolute necessity that it stays on plans," he said. "It's been on maps for 100 years and it has not been until recently that people worried about it because they thought it would open the floodgates to development."

Hooper also criticized the allocation system in the master plan. He believes the entire system should be scrapped.

He called it "an unnecessary monster, an unworkable monster."

"It will create a heavy workload for the (Monterey County) planning staff and I trust it will create a pretty heavy workload for the courts."

He said the allocation system will open the floodgates for applications from subdivision developers almost immediately after the plan is adopted. "The county will have more applications for lots in the first year than the total buildout will allow," he said.

The board of supervisors will again open hearings for the master plan at 1:15 p.m. June 5 in the Monterey County Courthouse in Salinas.

Greenwood said he fears the front-loading system will promote competition for development approvals so early in the life of the master plan that it could result in projects that may not fit into the needs of the Carmel Valley housing market.

would be lifted once the Carmel Valley Master Plan is adopted. The plan will be considered again by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors June 5 after the board heard public testimony about the plan last week.

He said he believes developers might find themselves in a more competitive situation to develop their projects with the front-loading system than they would without any master plan annual allocation system.

"Without front-loading, developers would be more apt to wait for market conditions to improve before they go ahead with their projects," he said.

Developers have made the same claim to argue against the annual allocation system, but Greenwood said it is especially true with the intensive allocations the draft master plan would allow during the first two years.

"We're concerned on both sides," Greenwood said.

School board to decide fate of Captain Cooper

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL Unified School District Board of Education will tackle a lengthy agenda May 29 that includes the future of Captain Cooper School, a busing fee, the high school athletic program and the 1984-85 tentative budget.

Trustees will travel about 30 miles south for the 7:30 p.m. meeting at Captain Cooper School in Big Sur. It is board policy to meet once a year at the small kindergarten through fifth grade school.

The meeting at Captain Cooper is appropriate since trustees are expected to hear a report on school activities and probably discuss the potential impact of the closure of the Naval Facility at Point Sur, Supt. William Rand told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook May 18.

Enrollment at Captain Cooper School is expected to dip by about 15 students if the Navy completely closes its 26-year-old base at Point Sur. There are approximately 125 Navy personnel stationed at the base.

But Rand said he recommends that the board not act hastily on the fate of Captain Cooper because it is possible the base may be converted to housing for personnel stationed at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey.

"The question is what Point Sur will be used for when it is closed," Rand said. "There is talk that the Naval Postgraduate School will use it for housing. In that case it may help our enrollment."

Rand does not expect the Navy to make any firm decisions until later this year.

BUSINESS MANAGER Ed Miyasaki also is expected to present trustees with a follow-up report on the May 10 budget study session.

The report is to focus on the series of "assumptions" trustees made to reduce the approximate deficit of $150,000 in the $6.78 million 1984-85 budget.

These "assumptions" include income from the busing fee ($41,000), reduction in allocations for extra teachers ($64,000), and additional state payments based on increased cost of living adjustments and new legislation ($80,000).

Despite all of the potential increases, trustees probably still will face a deficit when serious budget work begins this summer.

It is the size of the deficit that is unknown because decisions still are to be made on a reserve (usually $100,000) and staff pay increases ($50,000 for each 1 percent pay hike).

The proposed contract with the Association of Carmel Teachers (ACT) also is the subject of the May 29 meeting.

Pat Yates honored by Volunteers in Action

Pat Yates of Carmel Highlands was one of many people honored by the Volunteers In Action organization during a special reception Wednesday, May 9. Mrs. Yates was nominated by the Carmel Middle School Parent-Faculty Club in recognition of her service to the school.

"You just think there are so many other people who deserve it too," was Mrs. Yates' reaction to the certificate of appreciation.

Mrs. Yates and husband Jim moved to Carmel Highlands almost five years ago. He is a member of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education. They have two children, Jennifer, 13, a middle school student; and Jeff, 8, who attends River School.

Mrs. Yates is a member of the Carmel Middle School School Site Council and the Parent-Faculty Club. She previously served on the River School Parent-Faculty Club.

The middle school club raised $20,000 this year for a variety of school programs. Mrs. Yates helped with the annual magazine sales drive, the Easter Bunny sale and the dances.

She plans to join the Carmel High School Boosters Club when daughter Jennifer enters the ninth grade this fall.

DAVID AVILA

Carmel High student wins $1,000 Kiwanis scholarship

A Stanford-bound Carmel High School student, David Avila, has been awarded a $1,000 scholarship from the Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club.

Avila is no stranger to Carmel Valley Kiwanians. He was a member of the Kiwanis-sponsored Boy Scout Troop 127 and, in fact, earned the rank of Eagle.

The Carmel High senior's scholastic achievement earned him a life membership to the California Scholarship Federation and an acceptance into Stanford University.

He was a four-year tennis letterman, a trumpet player in the Tri-County Honor Band and an active member of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church.

His discovery of classical literature, however, seems to have Avila spellbound at present. He told the Kiwanis Club scholarship nominating committee in his resume that his participation in a British literature class has "given me a new desire to read classic novels and gain exposure to literature in general."

He has also mastered the German language in an intensive daily two-hour German class.

Avila is employed part time in a gourmet seafood restaurant in Carmel and will find the Kiwanis Club scholarship handy since annual tuition to Stanford is more than $16,000.

Bronson series
a real success

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

IN THE CONCERT business, artistic success is the exception, not the rule. Even with big names, the odds do not favor the fulfillment of promise.

The Carmel Music Society suffered the double disappointment this season of two cancellations, and neither Rudolf Firkusny, nor David Geringas, nor Ruggiero Ricci gave the Monterey County Symphony their best.

But one series, and a young one at that, has enjoyed an inordinate rate of success. The Keyboard Artist Series of Bronson Concerts has just completed its third season with style and distinction. Organizationally and artistically, all the Bronson Concerts should have to do to enjoy a reputation equal to any other music organization in town (and better than some of the best known) is to maintain its standards.

But music institutions in this town are made largely of other stuff, like tradition, social whirlers, power brokers, particular money, and soap opera intrigues. The absence of most of these explains in part the smallish audiences in attendance at many Bronson keyboard concerts, for, in truth, the quality of artists has been exceptionally high, even while some of the names are not well known.

The Bronson success results, in large measure, from the hands-on selection of artists made at piano competitions, and at least on recent hearings by Lyn and Renee Bronson. Such an artist as 20-year-old Alan Gampel, who played Sunday afternoon at Sunset, could not expect to be included in a subscription series without the kind of attentions paid to their projects by the Bronsons. Additionally, the Keyboard Artist Series enjoys an excellent stable of instruments on which the visiting artists play.

Even though the series has not attracted the numbers of listeners it deserves (there have been some notable exceptions, like the Andre Michel Schub concert) the Bronson audiences have been the winners on almost every occasion, with superb pianos, and mostly superb musicians who display at least interesting if not always fascinating musical personalities.

BOLDNESS seems an element in some series engagements. We may admire and appreciate the Bronsons' choice of Alan Gampel (and we surely do) but local wisdom indicates that there is insufficient name or reputation recognition to fill a house. And so it was on Sunday, but with great rewards for those who attended. Anyway, the season ended in the black, and the just-announced 1984-85 season will add another year of strong artists to the Bronson tradition.

As fine as anything heard here all year were the first two of Debussy's Images, Book II in which Gampel's delicate tracings, deftly poised in a pedaled scarf of fragile silk, retained every articulation and every tone. Here was Debussy as both impressionist (in spite of himself) and astonishing master of musical art. Gampel's playing was riveting, and achieved its magic with essential musicianship and remarkable delicacy of touch and balance.

The other highlights of the day were the Chopin Sonata in B Flat Minor and Liszt's Mephisto Waltz. The Chopin deserves a movement-by-movement comment. After a curt introduction, the first movement was off to the races, full of impetuous fire and demonic drive. The lines were not always clear, but the propulsion of the piece was breathtaking, sounding often like Rachmaninoff in his blustering youth.

That character continued in the scherzo, though the quiet middle espoused no particular poetry and was given a straightforward treatment. The Funeral March again lacked poetic indulgences, but in its da capo return, Gampel amazingly darkened and softened its color without changing anything else. The finale was like watching Seurat's Grande Jatte roll by on a window shade, its points of color always clear but moving so fast as to leave only the most fleeting impression.

The Mephisto Waltz was another tour de force of pianism that brought gasps from the audience at its conclusion, and a Scarlatti encore.

The Bach Italian Variations that opened the program set the tone for fine playing, and an adventure in cleanly articulated ornaments. The Beethoven Sonata in A flat, Op. 110, made the least impression of the afternoon, suggesting what should have been obvious but wasn't — that Gampel is still a student. Essentially, the work was a composite of the composers the young artist knew better, instead of the Beethoven Gampel is bound to discover.

Bronson Concerts next season will return some of the more interesting pianists we have heard before, including Jeffrey Swann whose liquid legato graced Sunset twice before (once in a Bronson engagement), Tong-II Han who played the Tchaikovsky Concerto with the Monterey County Symphony to open Sherwood Hall, Frank Wiens who won the Carmel Music Society's Young California Artist Competition a couple of years ago, and Roy Bogas who gave the Bronson series this season one of its most interesting concerts.

Tor House 65th anniversary celebrated this year

stones that rolled in the sea for a thousand years have climbed the cliff and stand stiff-ranked in the house-hurricane may spit his lungs out they'll not be moved," son Jeffers said in his poem "The Old Stonemason" his home, Tor House.

These stones he spent years setting in place to form the walls of Tor House and Hawk Tower on Carmel Point have taken a wrecking crew only hours to knock down after, had no one cared.

Someone did care.

This year marks the 65th anniversary of the completion of Tor House, which Jeffers helped the Monterey contractor Murphy build in 1919, and the 60th anniversary of the completion of its companion structure, Hawk Tower, built by Jeffers for his wife, Una.

About a handful of people who banded together in 1977 without the National Trust for Historic Preservation, the structures so closely associated with the poetry of Jeffers easily have been demolished.

Jeffers and Una originally owned five acres on which they built their home and raised two boys, Donnan and Garth.
They planted about 2,000 pine, eucalyptus and cypress trees (few of which still stand) and wrote poetry which brought him fame and respect world-wide. As the years went by, civilization encroached in the form of property taxes and development districts, making it necessary to gradually sell some land. After Jeffers' death in 1962 (Una died in 1950), the land was sold until, in 1977, Donnan and his wife, Lee, bought the Tor House parcel left — less than one acre.

It was a fearful that any potential buyer might decide to tear down the house and tower, the heirs let it be known that, if a group were formed to save Tor House and Hawk Tower, the price for the property could be considerably lower than the current market value of $500,000.

Farr, local attorney and former state senator, became involved. He called friends and acquaintances to remind them of the importance of Tor House. Thus, the Tor House Foundation was formed. After the foundation contacted the National Trust for Historic Preservation, which paid $5,000 one-year option to purchase Tor House (and which gave the foundation a year to raise the rest of the down payment
, plus additional funds for maintenance and operation), the foundation secured tax-exempt status from the Internal Revenue Service and fund-raising efforts began in earnest.

It was a busy year, according to William Gahagan, the foundation's first executive director. Farr, Gahagan, and the Tor House Foundation board of directors, Allston
J. Capt. Norman Chetlin, Amanda Backer, Ansel
J. Dame, Judith Anderson, Edwin Bliss, Professor
J. Brophy, Maggie Downer, Amelia Elkinton, Walter S.
J. Dick, David Hughes, Joseph A. Lee Jr., Dr. Lawrence
J. Powell, Alfred E. Smith, George White, and William
J. of the National Trust all began working to save Tor

Plans were written, phone calls were made, plans were made. Journalists in San Francisco and Los Angeles, many of them friends of Gahagan, wrote newspaper articles and sought urging donations to help save — as Kevin Starr of the San Francisco Examiner put it — "our single most important literary monument in this state."

There was a down payment of $67,500, plus other money such as a grant of $25,000 from the Maurine Church Coburn
Trust and enough money for operating expenses

HISTORIC Tor House and Hawk Tower (above), built by the late poet Robinson Jeffers, celebrate a 65th anniversary this year.

for a year. It all had to add up to at least $100,000 in order to satisfy the agreement with the National Trust and take over its purchase option. The purchase price of the property was $250,000.

Slowly at first, the money came in. Gahagan said the foundation often received envelopes containing one or two dollars.

The first big money raiser was a bus trip down the Big Sur coast, with Ansel Adams, Fred Farr, John Dotson, William Gahagan, Marlan Beilke, Allston James, David Hughes and Professor Tokuhiko Miura of Tokyo, a Jeffers scholar, on hand to read poetry and discuss Jeffers. It was a booming success and raised $1,500.

Then came the holidays and a traditional English-Christmas party in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Webster Downer, which raised $1,800 for the foundation.

As the weeks rolled by, the money rolled in, including a grant from the city of Carmel for $25,000, made in recognition of the property's great architectural, historical and personal significance to Carmel residents and visitors. In all, $120,085 was raised.

Finally, on Feb. 28, 1979, the Tor House Foundation presented Donnan Jeffers with a check for the down payment and officially took title. Donnan and his wife, Lee, received life tenancy in the east wing of the house. Since Donnan's death in 1982, Lee resides there with her son, Robin. Donnan's twin brother, Garth, lives with his family in Redding, Calif.

Today, Tor House looks much as it did during Jeffers' lifetime. Fund-raising projects continue in order to keep it that way. In "The Old Stonemason," he said:

"The old granite stones, those are my people;

"Hard heads and stiff wits but faithful, not fools, not chatterers;

"And the place where they stand today they will stand also tomorrow."

Docents who lead tours at the place where "the old granite stones" stand each Friday and Saturday between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. often speak of it as a magical place. Magic? Perhaps there was some magic involved in a handful of people being able to save something so unique.

During this 65th anniversary year, the people of the Monterey Peninsula, as well as visitors, are invited to come and experience for themselves the magic that is Tor House and join the foundation. Information is available by calling 624-1813.

Business Beat

Sade's finds new owner

By FLORENCE MASON

"THEY GOT it!" said Juanita Fields.

"We did it!" said Don Bowen.

And so the news is out: John Fields, owner of Sade's cocktail lounge in Carmel, is the new owner of the Stock Exchange restaurant. Don Bowen, Carmel Business Sales, worked with former owner Persephone Comte for 10 months and since then with John Fields as his client, so he too was very happy about the outcome of hearings earlier this month in bankruptcy court.

A key to Fields' plans for the restaurant, which is on Dolores Street (Su Vecino Court) appears to be his hiring of Gary Hagen as chef. Hagen has worked with Fields on the plans that resulted in the winning bid for the bankrupt restaurant. Described by Fields as "a very accomplished young chef," Hagen was chef at the Monterey Whaling Company restaurant in Mountain View, and a seafood specialist in Seattle.

I talked to Mrs. Fields but to date have not caught up with John for more detailed information about his plans. I can tell you that the restaurant will serve breakfast, lunch and dinner and that it is going to be "more like a pub," similar in style to Carmel's Bully III and Jack London's. More in my next column.

In July 1982 I wrote that Persephone Comte, "a transplanted New Yorker," had taken over the Vital Foods shop on San Carlos and renamed it Feeling Great. In a short time Mrs. Comte, the widow of a physician, added two other Carmel businesses to her fold: Em Le's restaurant and the Stock Exchange. At that time, the Stock Exchange had been in the remodeling stage for two years.

Mrs. Comte, who had no prior experience as the owner of one business — let alone three — started to divest herself of her properties in June of 1983. The first to go was Em Le's, sold to Ken and Marie Crank last summer. Then just last month, Doug Stevens took over Feeling Great. Stevens, a young man in his first business venture, will reopen the store in June, and there may be some surprises. We'll follow up on his plans.

Now, with the sale of the Stock Exchange, Mrs. Comte's brief foray into business in Carmel apparently has ended. All this in less than two years!

HORSE AND BUGGY

The buggy that graced Ellie's Hayloft has found a new home, and we can tell you about special opportunities to have the use of a horse-drawn buggy for that special picnic or other occasion.

Will Wilson called to tell me about the buggy and its future. He bought the buggy from Ellie Lester and with gardener Tommy Harris (who is also Harris Stage Lines) rents that buggy and others, with horses from Ray Hackworth's stables in Carmel Valley.

Wilson's interest is enhanced by the fact that he is the owner of The Market at the Monterey Baking Co. on Ocean Avenue in Carmel. He suggests that you can take food from his market and enjoy it at the end of a horse-and-buggy ride to Jacks Peak or any of the other wonderful picnic spots on the peninsula.

The enterprising partners have permits from Monterey and Pacific Grove to operate their horse and buggy through those cities at certain hours of the day. In Carmel, it is a different story, "although the police were very nice about it," Wilson said. City ordinances don't permit that type of transportation within Carmel. (Several attempts have been made by other would-be entrepreneurs to have some form of horse-drawn transportation approved for Carmel, each time unsuccessfully.)

As for Wilson's market, which he acquired last September, "It's doing beautifully!"

PREVENTION IS THE KEY

The Carmel Fire Department is looking for metal trash containers in the business district, and hopes to find them.

Fire Marshal Vern Allred said the department has launched a campaign to enforce the city ordinance which requires the use of metal trash receptacles with tight-fitting lids in the business district.

The department now tags any receptacle that does not meet the requirements. The tag warns that failure to comply with the city ordinance could lead to legal action.

The department will follow up in about 30 days and issue citations if the owners of the businesses have not complied. Allred said most of the businesses in Carmel are already in compliance but he expects to find "about 25 percent" that are not.

NOTES AND NAMES

You have about a week more in which to see the photographs of Roger Theisen, "artist of the month" featured by San Francisco Federal Savings and Loan.

Theisen, who currently lives in Monterey and works as a freelance photographer, has exhibited photographs and won awards at the Monterey Museum of Art, Santa Cruz County Fair, Monterey County Fair, Tucson Museum and the Old Pueblo Museum. His photographs can be seen from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Friday at S.F. Federal offices in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center.

INTRODUCING...

It's always a pleasure to introduce new professional men and women in our town. Especially when they are as pleasant — and as enthusiastic about Carmel — as physician David Terman and attorney Tom Nash.

Dr. David Terman came to Carmel "because I wanted to get more involved in patient care again," he said. "This was an outstanding opportunity which I accepted after looking at many areas and individual practices."

In turn, Dr. Daniel Gornel told his patients and friends that it was "with great pride and pleasure that I introduce to you Dr. David Terman, who will be associating with me in the practice of internal medicine and nephrology."

Dr. Terman came from Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, where he was an associate professor of medicine. In addition to his experience in internal medicine and nephrology, Dr. Terman is the author of more than 65 scientific publications and textbook chapters.

Among other professional associations, he is a member of the prestigious American Society of Clinical Investigation. In addition to internal medicine and nephrology, he will work with hypertension and immunological disorders — both fields in which he has been interested for some time.

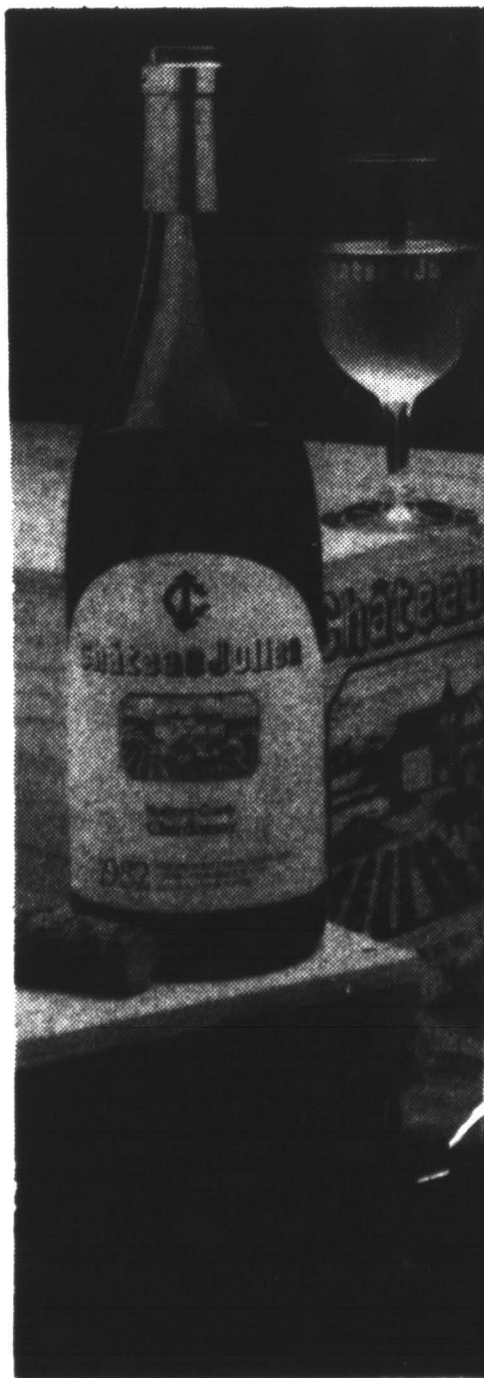

Dr. Terman is married and has two children — Erica, a new student at Carmel High School, and Jennifer, at Middle School. Mrs. Terman (Naomi) is a speech pathologist and artist, with a master's degree from Cornell University. When I asked him what he and his family do in their leisure time he said: "We're a family family; we do lots of things together." That includes tennis and swimming.

Tom Nash is a recent graduate of the Monterey College of Law. In fact, he may be the first graduate of that young but very successful law school to open his own offices in our town.

Nash is not new to Carmel. He has lived here more than 10 years. For several years he ran his own business in Carmel — Speedy Delivery. After he sold his practice, he concentrated on law school. His practice will be in general law "excluding some of the questions.

Sandy Swain, chairwoman of the planning commission, expressed some concern about location of the law office in what is at least partly a residential area. Assistant planning director Diane White said it is a permitted use in that district, and Nash pointed out that on his side of the street there is one individual residence, and two apartment buildings in the immediate vicinity. He added that all the space on the opposite side of the street is occupied by businesses. Anticipating a question about parking, he said he has arranged to make his own off-street parking space available for clients.

Nash readily agreed to the one condition the board wanted to attach to its approval of his application for a business license: his office will be open during "normal" business hours only — "9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the outside," the young attorney said.

"A STORE FOR ALL REASONS"

A couple of fugitives from Southern California suggest that you visit their new Crossroads shop, Essentials, "for the fun of it." When I asked what they sell there, Janet Richards said: "A little bit of everything, and everything that is a little different."

"Everything" includes stationery, greeting cards, games, candles, custom framing, prints, rugs, chairs, desks, clocks, glassware, flatware, coffee, tea and jam. And a few other things as well. "Fun things to get and to have," Ms. Richards said.

She and co-proprietor Serge Gomez both have been in other businesses in the past; but this is their first venture together in a retail business. Why Carmel, and The Crossroads? "Because it's beautiful!" Janet Richards said. "Skies are blue and the air is fresh and clean."

If you are looking for Essentials, look for the only red store front on the main boulevard of The Crossroads. You can't miss it.

MUSICAL CHAIRS IN THE MAY COURT

Now let's see if you can follow this! Laura's Ladyfingers Nail Boutique is moving forward one space in the May Court, on Mission Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues. "It's a larger space, and there is better ventilation," Laura Norman told the business license board. She explained that the frequent use of lacquers and other materials in her business creates fumes that can gather in a less well-ventilated area.

Moving into the space being vacated by Laura's is a business new to Carmel: Designs by Mary Van Ryn. She designs and makes wedding dresses and evening wear.

The young designer had worked out of her home in Monterey. "I found I needed more room and a separate place of business," she said.

In addition to her own custom clothes and alterations, she will sell a few bridal fashion accessories, such as sachets and ring-bearer pillows.

criminal," he said. He'll work out of an office that is also his home, on Mission Street.

Single, Tom Nash has become the third generation in his family to practice law. His predecessors liked smaller towns too, but that was in Massachusetts.

Nash did his homework before he appeared at a meeting of the Carmel business license board, perhaps in anticipation of

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

A new form of inexpensive housing for older people, imported from Australia, is beginning to be seen in the U.S., specifically in some parts of Pennsylvania, Maryland and California. A small prefabricated house, costing about $20,000, is moved onto the property of a grown child. Called a "granny flat," "elder cottage" or "echo housing," the little house enables the older residents to be completely independent, inexpensively and with the security of having family nearby. Sometimes the houses, which are portable, are rented from a company for as long as they're needed; other times they're purchased. Though not all towns are yet zoned for this form of housing, it is expected to grow in acceptance over the next few years.

*** Americans spend $22.4 billion a year on drugs and medical supplies, a large portion for use by older people, yet studies by the Food and Drug Administration and by several universities show that up to half of this medication is taken improperly. The two most common errors are a failure to follow doctors' or labels' directions and the taking of a combination of drugs which can produce health threatening side effects.

Presented as a service to our senior citizens and the people who care about them, by the

Shopping by computer eliminates the drudgery

N.Y. Times News Service
The Dellinger family of Stewartstown, Pa. used to shop for Christmas presents by driving 20 miles over rolling countryside, past orchards, corn and soybean fields, to the nearest department store.

Last fall, however, they made some of their holiday purchases a bit early and bought a sewing machine and a stereo without leaving home, and without using a mail-order catalogue.

They did their shopping by computer. "It was exciting and it was fun," said Deborah Dellinger, who compared it to shopping by catalogue. "You can sit down with a paper and pencil and get the same results, but it's more fun using the computer."

Already well on its way toward revolutionizing Americans' work and play habits, the computer is slowly beginning to change the way they shop. Teleshopping services, as they are called, are becoming available around the country, and enable customers to browse through electronic catalogues and order everything from toys to crystal to theater tickets from their personal computers. And, for shopping away from home, teleshopping services are appearing in retail stores, airports, hotels, credit unions and even athletic clubs.

After a decade, one such service, Comp-U-Card International Inc. of Stamford, Conn., turned a profit for the first time last fall. Another, Byvideo Inc. of Sunnyvale, Calif., is testing shopping terminals in the San Francisco area. A third, the Viewdata Corp. of America, a subsidiary of the Knight-Ridder newspaper chain, started a videotex service that includes teleshopping in Florida last fall.

And Times Mirror Videotex Services and Keycom Electronic Publishing are expected to start services in Chicago and Orange County, Calif., respectively, this summer.

Those offering teleshopping services say they present a new convenience to shoppers who do not have access to large department or specialty stores, such as people in rural areas. In addition, they wager that the convenience of shopping at any hour, without crowds or traffic, will stimulate sales.

But the field is still young. Retail consultants and analysts believe teleshopping will catch on, but not until the late 1980s or early 90s.

The "short-term hurdle" is getting computers and modems, which link computers by telephone, into homes, said Michelle Rutkowski, research manager for CSP International Inc., a telecommunications consulting firm. "There are households that do not want to spend $600 or $900 or $1,200 for a personal computer."

Indeed, only 8.5 percent of American households now contain a computer. But that number will rise to more than 40 percent by 1989, and more than 75 percent by the mid-1990s, said Tricia Parks, vice president of the home computer group at Future

Computing Inc. of Richardson, Tex., which does research for the personal computer industry.

Most teleshopping is also hindered, at least for now by its own technology. It is usually too difficult or expensive, if not technologically impossible, to place even a still photograph of the merchandise on screen, said Herbert Wittkin, a management consultant who specializes in marketing. In time, however, motion pictures will be widely used, and "then it will be a boom."

Festival stage set to honor our squid

By ANNE PAPINEAU

SQUID means different things to different people. To some, it conjures up those sweet little rings of batter-coated meat with a dab of tartar sauce on the side.

Others know them as highly intelligent sea creatures that like to congregate in groups. Some folks simply picture Kirk Douglas poking a big spear in the center of a ship-long squid whose basketball-sized eyes popped like co-star Peter Lorre's in 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea.

Whatever your perception of Loligo opalescens (yes, that's our local squid variety), the Kiwanis Club of Monterey will help you pay your respects to the mollusc and have some fun doing it. The first Great Monterey Squid Festival is set to go Sunday, May 27 at the Monterey County Fairgrounds.

From 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. The fairgrounds will be swimming with sights, sounds and aromas of the incredible, edible squid. No common denominator squid these; some of the finest restaurants on the Monterey Peninsula will be represented at food booths that will offer squid prepared dozens of ways.

When not hungry, visitors will be treated to music of every variety, contests, strolling clowns and such other un-squid activities as break dancing.

The Great Monterey Squid Festival has been in the planning stages for more than a year. According to Bob Massaro, one of the vice chairmen of the event, this festival will serve to spotlight the fishing industry in Monterey.

If successful, it will also raise funds for such Kiwanian-supported charities as the Special Olympics, Meals on Wheels and Scouting.

The Great Monterey Squid Festival has something planned for every taste. Three stages will showcase continuous entertainment. The Department of Fish and Game has provided a slide presentation about the Monterey fishing industry. The squid story will also be told through movies.

For the bold, a "touch tank" will be set up so visitors can handle gentle sea beings like snails and starfish.

Food will be a big item at the Great Monterey Squid Festival. According to entertainment chairman Ben Goldman, the dishes will be prepared "by some of the finest purveyors of food on the Peninsula. There will be delicacies and repasts for every taste."

If squid prepared a minimum of 15 ways by such eateries as The Lodge at Pebble Beach and Surdi's Two Guys from Italy does not appeal, there will be other items available.

Goldman stressed that the typical "greasy fair food" will not be allowed. Instead, some 35 food booths will offer culinary treats like real ice cream, bagels with lox and cream cheese and pastrami sandwiches. A Squid Festival recipe is reproduced in the Dining Guide of The Monterey Peninsula Review.

Massaro said 10,000 visitors are expected for the first Great Monterey Squid Festival. A souvenir squid cookbook will be available. If the Festival proves to be a success the Kiwanis intend to make it an annual tradition, he said.

Admission to the Great Monterey Squid Festival is $3 per person, $1.50 for children ages six through 12. To get to the Monterey County Fairgrounds take the Casa Verde exit off Highway 1 in Monterey. For more information, call 649-6544.

THE CONTE FOUR Band, led by Monterey native Frank Conte, will bring its blend of musical styles to the Great Monterey Squid Festival Sunday, May 27. In addition to its leader, the band is composed of Carmel native Marty Artellian, Charlie Brown and George Johnston.

Cal Rep extends plea to 'invest in the best'

By ANNE PAPINEAU

IF DONATIONS and box office do not pick up, the curtain may fall permanently on the Pacific Grove-based California Repertory Theatre. Producing director Ben Benoit, who addressed a gathering of theater staff and press members last week, stated "I can see the lint in the bottom of the pocketbook ... we can survive another month."

Benoit told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook "the contributors' support and box office have not been up to expectations due to a whole range of factors. The marketing materials we used were about a month late in production. Our income has been a bit behind the curve. We have been making do with less."

Making do with less was illustrated in a handout distributed at the meeting. According to the report, the 1984 Cal Rep budget called for $266,000 to be spent by this point in the season. "We have actually spent $126,000, or about 47 percent of the projected budget," the release said.

"We are managing the company as well as we possibly can," Benoit said. "We're not just spending money."

The producing director called the news conference, he said, to dispel rumors that ranged from his quitting to the takeover of Cal Rep by the Globe Theater in San Diego.

At the same news conference, Benoit stressed that the rocky fiscal situation which presently threatens the regional theater is "not unusual for a company our age."

Benoit cited Berkeley Rep, ACT and others as examples of noted theater companies that weathered first-year survival woes. To combat what he termed "dire straits," the producing director proposed the start of an "Invest in the Best" campaign.

"Over the next two weeks we will be asking our subscribers, past contributors, our audience members and the residents of the central coast to contribute $5, $10, $50 or more to insure our survival," Benoit reported. "Our goal for this 'Invest in the Best' campaign is $100,000."

Benoit declined to specify exactly how much Cal Rep is in the hole. The news release stated that the regional theater has spent less than its projected budget — which would indicate fiscal health. But, as Benoit pointed out, "I suppose that would seem logical if indeed we had $266,000. We've run a little short."

Evidence of the dire straits experienced at Cal Rep is postponement of opening night of The Dining Room, a humorous play by A.R. Gurney scheduled to open May 24. The play will open June 2 instead, with some performances of Bullshot Crummond taking its place in the meantime.

KAREN LAMB and Randy Haegge appear in the California Repertory Theatre production of Bullshot Crummond. The financially beleaguered professional theater has

"We're going to hold on and work on The Dining Room and not fly into it," Benoit said.

"A regional theater is by the nature of the beast a regional trust," Benoit said. He added that if Cal Rep charged audiences the full value of tickets the prices would double. "Then we'd be back to being an elitist organization — that's theater for the few."

Tickets currently cost from $7.50 per person for preview performances to $17.50 for champagne openings. Discounts are given to groups and students.

Benoit expressed optimism that Cal Rep would pull out of its financial depression. "We're only two weeks from the onslaught of tourism," he observed.

"It's real hard to explain to people who aren't in this business, who aren't in non-profit, non-commercial theater," he said. "It usually takes about five years to get them off the ground. Those first three to five years are extremely hairy. I'm borne out by the reviews. We've demonstrated we are able to perform and deliver a high-quality product."

I Cantori sings

A CONCERT of works by Bach and Beethoven will be presented by I Cantori di Carmel at 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, May 26-27 in the Carmel Mission.

Sal Ferrantelli will direct the chorus. The program will feature J.S. Bach's Cantata 106: Gottes Zeit ist die allerbeste Zeit (God's time is best), with a chamber orchestra of two flutes, two violas and continuo. Also to be performed is Ludwig van Beethoven's Mass in C Major, Opus 86, with a 33-piece orchestra headed by Concertmaster David Dally.

Tickets are $8. They are available at Do Re Mi, Carmel; Lily Walker Records, Pacific Grove, or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope with a check to Audrey Hellam, 1260 Seaview, Pacific Grove, 93950. For further information, call 372-4715 or 659-2390.

They're intelligent, gregarious creatures

Scientist examines the way of all squid

WHAT ARE these things called squid? William Gilly, assistant professor of biology at Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove, has been studying them for years. And Gilly is pleased that the spineless creatures are finally gaining recognition via The Great Monterey Squid Festival.

"I think it's a lot better to honor a squid than an artichoke or garlic bulb," noted the man of science. "A squid has more personality than an artichoke, more intelligence than a garlic bulb. So you can't lose."

Gilly knows what he's talking about. As a student of the sea, his education has shown him that there is much that remains mysterious about Loligo opalescens, the local squid variety.

"Squids are molluscs, which includes clams, oysters, stuff like that. Squids and octopus are one class," he explained. "Then there's a weird animal called the nautilus."

Loligo opalescens grow to a length of eight or nine inches, Gilly said. They are found in shallow water (60 to 80 feet) near the shore. Squid spawn in the sandy ocean bottom.

"That's where they're normally found in large numbers. Nobody really knows where they go when they're not there. They travel in big schools — they're very gregarious," Gilly said.

Squid, he pointed out, are predators that consume tiny fish. In turn, squid are hunted by commercial fishermen who work "not too far off the kelp beds" along Cannery Row between the Coast Guard breakwater and Lover's Point. He said the waters off the Holiday Inn in Sand City provide another good squid spot.

Hopkins Marine Station will sponsor a tank of live squid for the Great Monterey Squid Festival, scheduled Sunday, May 27 at the Monterey Fairgrounds.

Or at least it will try to obtain some of the gregarious schoolers for a live display. This task is not as easy as it sounds.

"You can't just turn a knob on a machine and have them fall into a boat," Gilly stated. "During the past year there was all this El Nino stuff that drastically changed all the animals in Monterey Bay, where they were and where they were not. And squid seemed to be strongly affected."

Biologists are not sure just where squid go when they're not spawning, he explained. The species caught in Monterey Bay are found from Vancouver to Catalina Island. "The species probably goes further than that. People work them over that range." He said a good night's commercial catch is around 10 tons of squirming squid.

For that Squid Festival tank, Hopkins

...mollusc expert explains squid

Marine Station employees have been fishing for a few days. Results have been, at best, mixed.

"They live about a week or 10 days in a tank. They're all dead now," Gilly said. "They need a lot of room to swim. They're just used to the open ocean. They're very intelligent animals and they're not very happy to be in a tank. They eat enormous amounts of food."

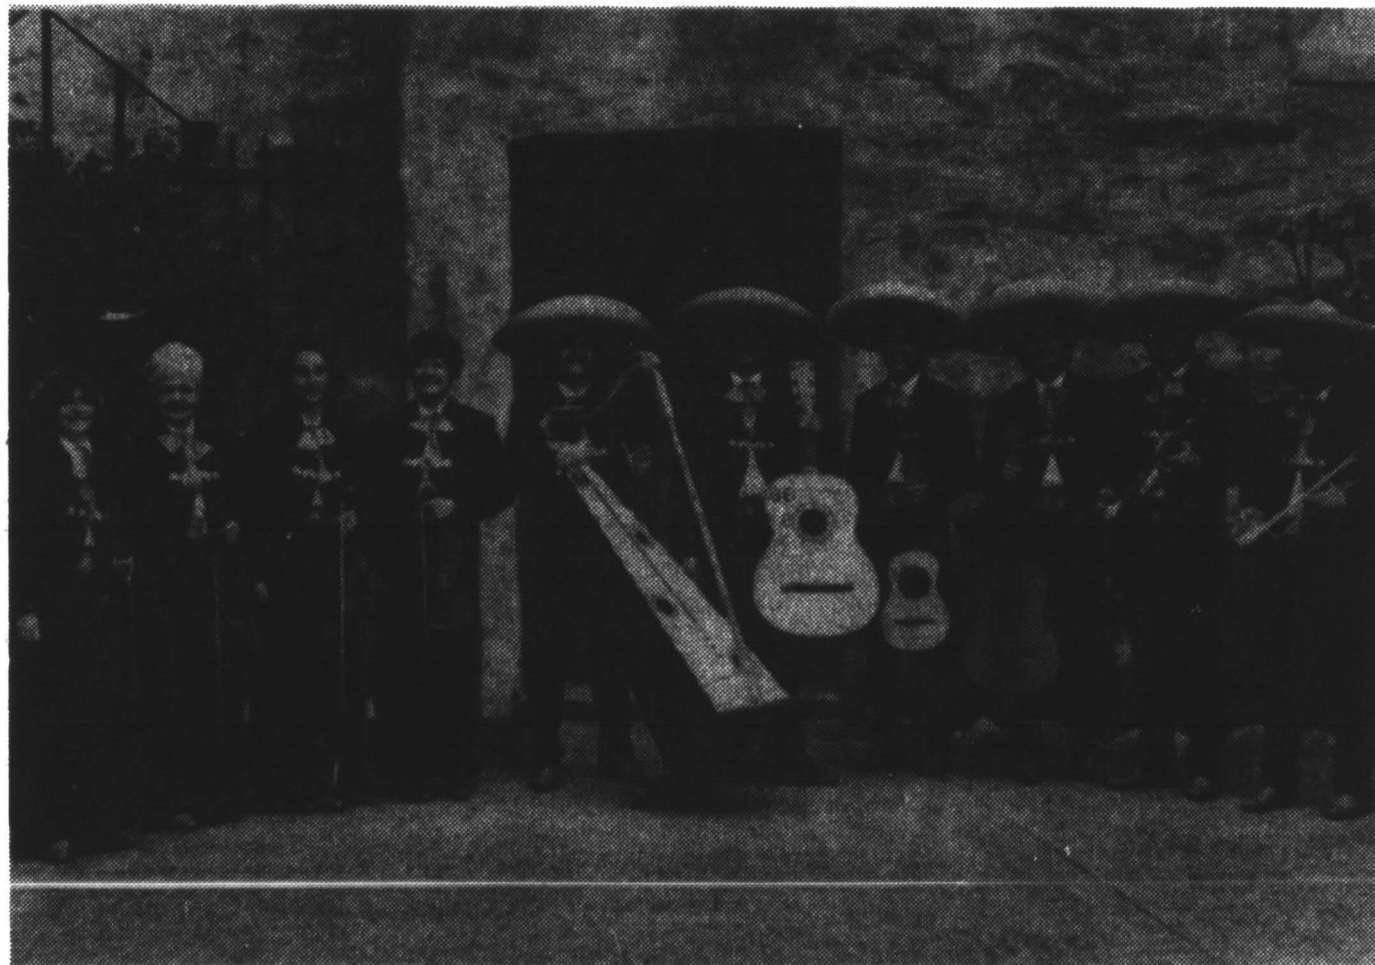

"If you had one or two they might make decent pets, but unless there are 20 or 50 together they don't behave right — they're skittish and upset. When you take one out of the school its brain must be completely short-circuited."

As promised, Hopkins Marine Station will work to come through with the live squid display. Gilly said they are fascinating creatures to observe at close range.

"Not many people have seen living squid," Gilly said. "We had an open house here two years ago. A commercial fisherman brought his father or grandfather. He didn't speak any English, only Italian. He had fished squid all his life, and had never really seen them close up swimming and eating. It was just amazing seeing him watching the squid."

Coastal Commission may resolve public access to Stillwater Cove

THE DILEMMA that has stalled final certification of the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program finally may be resolved by the end of the month.

The Coastal Commission may solve the dilemma when it considers a permit application by the Pebble Beach Co. May 25 in the Shelter Island Marina Inn in San Diego.

Most of the local coastal program for Del Monte Forest — or Pebble Beach — was adopted more than a year ago, but disagreement between the Monterey County Board of Supervisors and the Coastal Commission over whether the public should be able to gain access to Stillwater Cove Beach has stalled final certification.

The board of supervisors had embraced the position taken by the Pebble Beach Co. that access to the beach should not be allowed because it would be difficult to choreograph the movement of visitors to the beach across the Pebble Beach Golf Links without allowing public parking in the private Stillwater Cove Beach Club parking lot.

But the Coastal Commission insisted repeatedly that public access should be allowed to the 1,400-foot stretch of beach and it appeared the county and the commission would remain at loggerheads for a long time.

But when Pebble Beach Co. officials asked the Coastal Commission for a permit to demolish their pier in Stillwater Cove, commission officials made it abundantly clear that the permit would not be issued until a "beach access management plan" both the company and the commission could agree upon was submitted.

Company officials never sought the permit for pier demolition until last month.

Over the past year, company planners have drawn up a "beach access management plan" for the Stillwater Cove area and have met with Coastal Commission staff in an effort to meet state-mandated conditions for public access.

Linda Locklin, a planner for the Coastal Commission in Santa Cruz, said she believes the commission can accept the latest plan.

About a month ago, the company formally asked the commission to consider a permit to demolish the pier, which is closed and in disrepair, with the understanding that the beach access plan will be a "condition" to the permit.

Ms. Locklin said the beach access plan would require the company to build an access ramp from the Stillwater Cove Yacht Club parking lot to the beach. Access would be allowed from the site of the pier south to Arrowhead Point.

Zantman galleries celebrate 25 years

THE SILVER anniversary of Zantman Art Galleries, Ltd. will be celebrated with an exhibition of rural California scenes by Robert Clark.

The artist will be present at an opening reception, 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday May 26. Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served at the Sixth Avenue at Mission location of Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel.

Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Zantman came to the Monterey Peninsula in 1959 and opened the Hidden Village Coffee Shop in Monterey near the Custom House Plaza. Robert Clark was among the first artists represented at the coffeehouse/gallery. Others included Abel Warshawsky, Jeannette Lewis and S.C. Yuan.

The Zantmans opened a small gallery in Carmel on Sixth Avenue between Dolores and San Carlos streets in 1962. At the time there were only five other galleries in Carmel. In July of 1972 they acquired a commodious second location on Sixth Avenue at Mission Street. The Zantman family of galleries has since grown to include a third gallery in Palm Desert.

Robert Clark, whose work is showcased yearly at Zantman Art Galleries, is a native of Minneapolis, Minn. He received formal art training at the Minneapolis School of Art and the Walker School of Art.

Clark moved to California in 1948. For several years he executed large-scale murals for museums and corporations. These include The Resurrection at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Glendale. A Central California resident since 1964, Clark devotes his energies to painting chiefly in the egg tempera medium.

For additional information about this exhibition, call 624-8314.

RANCH — SAN LUIS OBISPO is an egg tempera landscape by Robert Clark. It can be viewed at the Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel. The artist will be present at a reception Saturday, May 26.

Book beat*Photography tome captures Big Sur magic

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE LATEST addition to the library of quality photographic books on the Monterey Peninsula is Big Sur and the Central Coast, published by Oxford University Press of Ontario, Canada.

It's a collection of 88 color plates by renowned photographer David Muench, with an introduction by Jeffrey Whitmore — local freelance writer and former editor of Monterey Life magazine.

The hardbound volume will delight those who recently have "discovered" the central coast region with permanent photographic evidence of God's bounty. Those who have long loved this area undoubtedly will find a new dimension to their appreciation in these pages.

Whitmore's introduction evokes much of the majestic mystery of this nature-haunted coastal outcropping, and he draws parallels between his own home on the Massachusetts shoreline with some of the features of the Monterey Peninsula.

Others — including Kentucky mountain men — also will find something that reminds them of home in the rugged hills of Big Sur, according to Whitmore. In fact, this may be the spiritual home for everyone who comes here in a way their natural home could never be, the author suggests.

Muench's photographs of seashore, warm valley, and craggy mountainside dazzle the senses. In the best use of the photographic medium, Muench's plates capture that elusive moment hidden to the eye by the overpowering presence of creation. By studying these photographs, one can detect elements in the natural landscape that sometimes escape notice because of the fleeting nature of experience.

Racina landscapes displayed

SUMMER OAK, an 18" by 36" work by Sam Racina, can be viewed at Gallery Americana, Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street, Carmel. For more information about this Racina retrospective, call 624-5071.

Photographic lighting taught

Jerry Lebeck will lead a two-day course in lighting Saturday and Sunday, May 26-27, at Monterey Peninsula College.

The workshop will prepare students to develop abilities in use of placement, distance and angles of lighting. The $150 tuition includes all lab fees. For information, call 646-4071.

Kent Butler exhibition opens

Club Place brings back good old-fashioned value in Carmel Valley.

At Club Place we place the emphasis on value. With just 46 brilliantly designed townhomes in the heart of the 1,700-acre private preserve of Carmel Valley Ranch, there's nothing quite like us anywhere. Club place is built alongside the magnificent 18-hole Pete Dye championship golf course. And it's adjacent to a super tennis club with 12 pro courts.

Club Place is very private, very exclusive. With such marvelous architectural touches as vaulted ceilings in some plans, cathedral and nine foot ceilings in others. All living rooms have fireplaces. As do many master bedroom suites. And there are whirlpool baths, greenhouse-windowed kitchens, redwood decks, family rooms, and countless pleasures that hark back to the days when builders built real honest value into their homes.

Club Place. Our Grand Opening prices are still available for lavish Carmel Valley townhomes starting at just $254,000. Nothing in the Valley even comes close.

But please hurry. There are only 46 of us.

Sales office and models open daily 10-6.
